HILL TOO PESSIMISTIC; PERHAPS MISQUOTED

Railroad and Business Men Admit Need of Caution, but Expect No Crisis.

HE CHARGES INACCURACY

Saying "The Interview as Reported Did Not Occur"—Nobody Else Seems to be Much Alarmed.

The views attributed to James J. Hill on the industrial and railroad situation in the interview telegraphed from St. Paul on Sunday night and published in the newspapers yesterday morning, caused a break in the stock market and provoked wide comment. In some quarters attention was directed to one expression in the interview as indicating that Mr. Hill had not intended all he said for publication. This expression was: "But just in order that you may see—" he said, "I don't care to have publicity given to my statements:" This view seemed to be borne out by a report from St. Paul last night that Mr. Hill had said there:

"The interview as reported did not occur."

The interview was originally published in The St. Paul Pioneer Press. It was stated from the office of that newspaper last night that Mr. Hill had not complained to it of any inaccuracy, but had verified the interview in a modified form in the St. Paul evening newspapers.

Particular attention was paid yesterday to the prophecy, which Mr. Hill was credited with making to President Taft, that "thousands of men would be thrown into idleness next year," and his explanation that this would be caused by the lack of new enterprises or extensions of old ones in the railroad and industrial world.

Roswell Miller, Chairman of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, thought Mr. Hill was too pessimistic in what he had to say regarding the outlook, but he agreed with his view that the present situation leaves much to be desired.

"Conditions, it is true, are not satisfactory," Mr. Miller said. "Business is curtailed and the earnings of the railroads for the most part are not satisfactory, but I feel that the situation will work out somehow.

"The question whether or not the particular rates now being investigated by the Inter-State Commerce Commission are allowed or not is a relatively unimportant one in itself, for even if these increases are granted they will be far from offsetting the increased expenses to which the railroads have been put. But every little bit helps, and if these increases are allowed it will have a good effect, although the effect will be sentimental rather than practical.

"It will show, however, that the commission is disposed to allow the railroads to raise the rates, and this will give ground for the hope that rate adjustments sufficient to increase the revenues of the railroads to the needed extent will be allowed.

"The revenues of the railroads must be increased much in excess of the amount that would come to them from the advances now asked if the companies are to avoid reducing either their maintenance charges or their dividends, and neither would be desirable."

President F. D. Underwood of the Erie Railroad, when he was asked yesterday for an opinion on Mr. Hill's views, said:

"I have read the article only hurriedly, and therefore am not in a position to comment on it, except to say that while I may not agree with all Mr. Hill said, his statement in the main is a very wise epitome of the situation."

Vice President Henry A. Smith of the National Bank of Commerce in an interview which was given out in Wall Street yesterday then commented as follows on the views of Mr. Hill:

"Mr. Hill is correct in many respects. There is going to be a curtailment in the buying powers of this country, and things will recede until the spotted conditions are completely eliminated. But I don't mean to convey that the country is going to pieces.

"Probably nothing drastic will happen, but prosperity cannot be looked for until we are in a more settled position. There are too many developments pending to warrant stability for some time to come.

"And not only that there is too much extravagance. People will have to change their mode of living."

Heads of the leading industrial companies with headquarters in New York were reluctant yesterday to make any comment on Mr. Hill's views. President E. T. Bedford of the Corn Products Refining Company, a Director in the Standard Oil Company, voiced the attitude of the leaders in industrial enterprises when he excused himself on the ground that he was not a railroad man, and so knew nothing of the conditions surrounding Mr. Hill, which might have colored his views.

"I can only speak of my own business," he said. "That is good, fair. There is nothing in the outlook to be concerned about."

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—James McCrea, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said to-night on his return from New York, where he had been looking over the company's new station:

"Business is marking time."

Mr. McCrea had been asked how he regarded James J. Hill's declaration that he had told President Taft that "many thousands of men would be thrown into idleness next year."

"This is one of the cases in which every man must judge for himself," Mr. McCrea added. "I hesitate to express an opinion that might be wrong. I think that business is marking time, but beyond that I do not care to go."

President Baer of the Reading refused to discuss the Hill interview.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 28.—President Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company declined to-day to discuss the Hill interview. He may have something to say later.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 28.—In the face of a sharp decline in stocks, particularly railroad and steel, as an undoubted result of the discouraging interview with James J. Hill, representative jobbers and manufacturers of St. Paul decline to admit that they are alarmed about business prospects.

C. J. McConville of Finch, Van Slycke & McConville declared that he saw nothing alarming in the situation. C. W. Gordon of Gordon & Ferguson, on the other hand, phrased his confidence somewhat more diplomatically, and admitted that business men throughout the country will undoubtedly be conservative in their plans involving an additional outlay of capital.

"I don't see it that way," was the comment of Theo. A. Schulze of Foote, Schulze & Co. on Mr. Hill's statement. "I can speak only for my own line of business, of course. We have enough orders now booked to keep us running ten hours a day through the Winter. Collec-

CLUE IN HESKETH MYSTERY.

Missing Heir of Sir Thomas Fermor-Hesketh May Be in Dublin.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The police of Dublin are working on a clue which, it is believed, will result in the discovery of Lieut. Frederick Fermor-Hesketh of the Ninth Lancers in that city.

This news causes little surprise, as after the son and heir of Sir Thomas and Lady Fermor-Hesketh disappeared on Oct. 30, being last seen on a mail boat crossing to Ireland, it was supposed that if he were not dead he would be found either in Ireland or in America.

Lady Hesketh is the daughter of the late Senator Sharon of California. Lieut. Hesketh is 26 years old, over 6 feet in height, and very handsome. Previous to his disappearance he had obtained a week's leave of absence from his regiment, and it is feared that he will be gazetted out of the army for absence without leave.

The family is very wealthy. Lady Hesketh inherited the greater part of her father's fortune.

MINISTERS' WIVES GUARDED.

Also Their Children, Owing to Fears of Suffragist Outrages.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Owing to the threats of the suffragettes to the Cabinet Ministers, even the Ministers' wives and families now have police protection of a kind not required since the days of the Fenian outrages.

Diana, the four-months-old baby of the Winston Churchills, was guarded by a stalwart detective when taken out in a perambulator for an airing today, as fears were entertained that the suffragettes would attempt to kidnap her.

H. A. Franklin, the male suffragist, who attempted to assault Mr. Churchill while the Home Secretary was returning to London after a speech at Bradford on Saturday night, was arraigned in the Bow Street Police Court to-day and remanded for a week. Bail was refused.

Franklin is a nephew of Postmaster General Samuel.

PRESERVE WHITNEY ESTATE.

Heirs of the Late Financier Form a Company to Prevent Its Dissipation.

To preserve intact the Whitney estate, at Wheatley Hills, L. I., the children of the late William Collins Whitney have formed a realty corporation. They filed yesterday in the Nassau County Clerk's office at Mineola deeds of ownership in the property to the Whitney Realty Company. The estate, which is one of the largest in the fashionable Wheatley Hills section, is worth about $1,000,000.

The deeds were filed by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Payne Whitney, Mrs. Pauline Whitney Paget, who lives in England, and Miss Dorothy Whitney. Miss Dorothy Whitney and Harry Payne Whitney live a large part of the year in the fine house on the estate, and Payne Whitney has a large place at Manhasset.

Winthrop & Stimson of 32 Liberty Street are named as counsel for the Whitney Realty Company, the junior member being Henry L. Stimson, Republican candidate for Governor in the recent election. Bronson Winthrop, in explaining the reason for this step, stated that the children of the late Mr. Whitney deemed it best to place the ownership of the property in the company, that its future might be assured better than by individual ownership, which might lead one of the heirs to sell his share. The plan is simply a legal arrangement, it was pointed out, to keep the estate in the family.

CROCKER LEFT $12,000,000.

$10,000,000 of It in Securities—Doubled the Inheritance Received from Parent

The appraisement of the estate of the late George Crocker values it at about $12,000,000. The appraisement was made by Eugene B. Hawkins, attorney for the estate, and it shows that the value of the real estate is about $2,000,000 and consists of the town house at 1 East Sixty-fourth Street, the country place at Barrington, N. J., and holdings in Larchmont and Tarrytown.

The town house was willed to Columbia University, but the bequest is now in litigation. The house and contents, the latter of which are appraised at about $130,000, was left to the university to provide a fund for the study of cancer, of which Mr. Crocker and his wife died. Mr. Crocker left securities valued at about $10,000,000, in which are included 10,000 shares each of Steel preferred and Steel common. His American Telegraph and Telephone securities are the next largest holdings.

Under the will the residuary estate goes to William H. Crocker, a brother; Harriet C. Alexander, a sister; Miss Jennie Crocker, a niece, and Charles T. Crocker, a nephew.

Mr. Crocker died possessed of just double what had passed to him under the will of his father, Charles Crocker, who left him a fifth of his $30,000,000 estate, on the condition that "for the space of five years continuously he shall abstain from the use of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors to the extent that he shall not during this period have been intoxicated." The legacy was duly earned, and his brothers turned over to him his share, $6,000,000.

TRAIN HITS SURREY; 3 DEAD.

Injured Girl Crawls to Dead Body of Man She Was to Marry on Jan. 1.

CANTON, Ohio, Nov. 28.—Three persons were killed and two badly hurt when a Wheeling & Lake Erie train struck a crowded surrey shortly before 9 o'clock to-night at the Maple Avenue crossing.

The dead are Mrs. Joseph H. Meyers, Morris Ress, aged 24, and Jacob Ress, aged 16.

The injured, who are at Ingleside Hospital, are Miss Fannie Meyers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Meyers, leg broken, internal injuries, will probably recover; William Levin, aged 13, scalp wound, possible fracture of skull, will probably recover.

The party was on its way from North Canton to the city. There are no gates or watchman at the Maple Avenue crossing.

Miss Meyers and Morris Ress were to have been married on Jan. 1. They fell near together, and the girl, as she recovered consciousness, crawled, in spite of her broken leg, a few paces to the dead body of her sweetheart. They were borne away in the same ambulance. It is feared that the shock of Ress's death will prove too much for the strength of the girl.

CREW IN MUTINY; COME AS PRISONERS

Skipper of the British Freighter Clan Maclean Arrives Here Under Arms.

REVOLVERS ARE DEALT OUT

Spanish Sailors Kept Between Decks After an Attempt to Take the Vessel.

With half her crew confined between decks and with the ringleader of a mutiny on board, the big British freighter Clan Maclean came to anchor yesterday under the shadow of the Statue of Liberty. The vessel had just passed through one of the stormiest voyages of her seagoing days. She is here from the Far East, and since she sailed from Colombo on Sept. 5 there have been two mutinies on board.

The vessel is of the half whale-back type, laden with sugar consigned to Barber & Co. She is officered by a sturdy lot of British seamen, and it is due to their efforts alone that she is not far from this port and under a piratical crew. Because of the fact that she was under orders as to her destination she was forced to steam hundreds of miles with her mutinous crew on board, the officers armed and prepared for trouble.

The second and most serious mutiny occurred when the vessel was within sight of these shores and approaching the Delaware Breakwater. When the Clan Maclean stopped at Gibraltar on Oct. 9 she was formed to replace with Spaniards some twenty of a Lascar crew who would go no further. The Spaniards appeared glad enough to come on board. Of all those shipped to meet the emergency only one, Garcia, could speak English. Because of his knowledge he became a sort of leader of the men.

They were a surly lot, and even before the vessel touched at St. Michael's on Oct. 15 they had shown a disposition to shirk work. There was no open break, but Chief Officer Waterhouse and Second Officer Kerr had to use persuasion to get them to work ship.

Open Mutiny Begins.

The Clan Maclean touched at Norfolk on Oct. 30. The Spaniards were still troublesome, but there had been no actual refusal to work. The Chief Engineer, a Scotchman, had all he could do to make his Spanish firemen keep up a head of steam. When the vessel came within sight of the entrance of the Delaware River, open mutiny broke out. Garcia appeared to be a first-class sea lawyer.

As the steamer came to the Breakwater, where she was to await the orders which finally took her to this port, the men refused to work. Led by the tall Spaniard they trooped forward to the officers' quarters. Capt. Alexander Williams, Waterhouse, and Kerr met them at the break of the deck.

"We're not going to work. We're in America," said the leader with a sweep of his arm taking in the American shore. The men massed behind him growled their assent in Spanish.

The crew had no particular grievance, but did not want to work. Some of those in the group are said to have fled from their native land because of their revolutionary tendencies. Many of them were from the engine room, and it was impossible to work ship without them. Capt. Williams appealed to them to fulfill the articles they had signed on coming aboard.

Garcia spoke to his fellow mutineers in Spanish, and the result was that they refused to return to their posts. They made a threatening move toward the officers. Kerr is a fine big type of the fighting Englishman. His fist met the leader and sent him reeling back upon his companions. This discouraged the mutineers and they fled aft.

Capt. Williams notified the authorities ashore, but they could do nothing as the vessel flies an alien flag. It was suggested to him that he go on up to Philadelphia and there lay his troubles before the representative of the British Government. As orders were expected every hour telling him where to sail he refused, and undertook the task of subduing the mutineers. The firearms on board were distributed to the few Englishmen and the chief engineer.

Met With Revolvers.

The officers endeavored once more to get the crew to work, but the men refused. A day or two later they again trooped to the bridge and demanded to see the skipper. They were met by the officers, every one armed with a revolver. Capt. Williams appeared on the forward deck. The chief of the mutineers told him that he and his companions wanted to leave the ship. They had done enough work, he said.

"This is the time for revolution," said the spokesman. "If you don't let us have our way we will take the vessel."

The answer was a leveled revolver over the rail pointed toward the men. The mutineers were disarmed save for pieces of timber they had picked up on the way to the officers' quarters, and so they halted at sight of the revolver.

Back of the little group of officers were a few of the Lascars who had elected to remain by the steamship when their mates left at Gibraltar. They crouched down near the rail some distance away, interested spectators of what was happening.

Kerr shook his fist threateningly, but it did not check the advance of the mutineers as they started forward to make good their threat to take the ship. A revolver shot rang out and then another. The shots went over the heads of the mutineers, but they quickly broke and fell back. At the second it was a retreat. The officers drove them back and confined them aft.

The vessel was in the Delaware Breakwater about two weeks. Soon after the mutineers were reduced to a state of submission orders were received to proceed to this port. With nearly all of her crew in restraint as mutineers the problem was how to get to this port. It took some time, but in the end enough short-term men were shipped to bring the vessel here. As the vessel swings at anchor not far from Liberty Island her officers are getting a much-needed rest, while aft a picturesque lot of mutineers peer over the rail looking with longing eyes at the American shore.

Capt. Williams came ashore early yesterday and laid his case before the British Consul. At the office of Barber & Co. it was admitted that there had been trouble on board and that the vessel would not berth until Thursday. It was said that unless the immigration authorities took a hand the mutineers would have to be landed.

PARK BOND ISSUE IN DOUBT.

Up-State Returns Going Against $2,500,000 Issue for Palisades.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Despite the fact that the vote in Greater New York was largely in favor of the adoption of the Constitutional amendment to provide for an increase in the number of Judges of the Court of Appeals by two and an increase in their salaries, and the proposition to authorize the State to issue $2,500,000 in bonds for the Palisades Park, there is a strong probability that the total vote in the State may be adverse to both.

About one-half of the up-State counties have returned their official canvass to the Secretary of State, and they indicate a trend of two and three votes against the propositions to one in their favor.

MISS BLAKE ESCAPES FROM HOME TO WED

Lowered Clothing from Window to Waiting Fiance, Says Lawyer Who Aided Them.

MARRIED AT STAMFORD

Father Here Denies Guarding House or Knowledge of Wedding—Groom Is H. T. Walker of This City.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 28.—Howard T. Walker, aged 24, son of William H. Walker, and Miss Fefe May Blake, 22 years old, both of New York, were married here early yesterday morning by the Rev John D. Skene, rector of St. Andrew's Church. Daniel M. Polsey, said to be a New York lawyer, was the best man. The other witness was provided here.

The couple had intended to be married here on Saturday night, and the best man had made arrangements by telephone with a Stamford Justice of the Peace. They did not keep the appointment.

When they arrived yesterday morning Mr. Polsey, the best man, told the Justice that the delay was due to the inability of the bride to get away from the home of her father, Frederick M. Blake, on Riverside Drive. The father opposed the marriage at this time, Mr. Polsey said, and he went so far as to have his house kept under police surveillance and his daughter watched to prevent a runaway match.

"But we outwitted them," Polsey told the Justice.

"Miss Blake sent what clothing and things she needed down a line of twine she had obtained and Walker and myself stood below and gathered them in. Then, early in the morning, when there was no policeman about, she slipped out of the house, and we came to Stamford. Once, when I had removed a relay of her clothing from the line, and stood near the front doorsteps, a policeman sauntered up and I thought it was all over. I stepped briskly up to the door, pretended to ring the door bell and tried to whistle unconcernedly. I guess I threw the policeman off his guard, for he didn't bother me."

Frederick M. Blake, whose home is a four-story residence at 337 West Eighty-fifth Street, just off Riverside Drive, refused last night to be interviewed about the reported marriage of his daughter. Through a woman who made several trips between the telephone and Mr. Blake the reporter was informed that Mr. Blake knew nothing about the affair, that the newspaper dispatch relating to it was news to him, and that he did not even know whether the marriage had taken place. He denied, however, that he had employed the police to watch his house and prevent his daughter's elopement. He would not say whether he knew where she was at the time or whether he would receive her back in his home.

Earlier in the evening, inquirers at the Blake home were referred to the Rev. C. Campbell Walker, rector of St. Ann's Protestant Episcopal Church, on Clinton Street, Brooklyn.

Mr. Walker said he had heard of the marriage, but that he knew the bridegroom, Howard T. Walker, only distantly, and the Blakes not at all. Walker, he said, was a son of William H. Walker, a stepbrother of the rector, who, he believed, was farming in Vancouver, British Columbia. Mr. Walker thought Walker was employed as a clerk in Manhattan.

A son of Frederick M. Blake, living at 69 West 107th Street, said last night that he had not heard of his sister's marriage. He had not visited his family for a long time, he said. His father, he said, had retired from business some time ago.

A special watchman employed to guard the houses near the Blake home said last night that he had seen a tall, slender young man, whom he believed to be Walker or his friend, wandering to and fro in front of the Blake home until long after midnight on Saturday. As he had noticed the young man there before he had not spoken to him or asked his business there.

OUR SAILORS VICTIMIZED.

Rows at French Ports Due to Shopkeepers' and Innkeepers' Greed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—The American bluejackets at Brest and Cherbourg have suffered a greater amount of imposition on the part of the native shopkeepers and innkeepers than usually falls to the lot of Jack ashore. This has been the real cause of nearly all the rows that have been reported, in most cases with great exaggeration.

Not only have the sailors of the second division of the fleet been in many instances charged four or five times the right price for the simplest refreshment or small purchase in a shop, but bad money of various kinds has been passed upon them. Still, having early learned the lessons of experience, they have been fairly on their guard since the first few days of the warships' visit to the French ports.

The newspapers of both Cherbourg and Paris have at last taken up the defense of the American sailors, denouncing the manner in which they were swindled, and putting the blame for nearly all the disturbances upon the shoulders of local ruffians.

There have been several flagrant cases of robbery or attempted robbery of American navy men, with murderous assaults.

Admiral Vreeland, in an interview, attributes a certain share of the disturbances to encounters between the worst element in the fleet and the worst element of the shore population, but he declares that on the whole the Americans have conducted themselves admirably. He repudiates the statement, which found its way into some French journals, that the American ships' companies are made up of the scum of all nations. He affirms that 95 per cent. of them are native Americans of honest and estimable character.

HUGHES TO HEAD THE SUPREME COURT

Judge Swayze of New Jersey and Secretary Nagel to Fill the Other Vacancies.

SLATE IS NOW MADE UP

Secretary Knox Probably Had a Chance to Accept One of the Justiceships and Possibly Senator Root.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Two weeks from to-day—on the second Monday of the coming session of Congress—President Taft will send to the Senate the names of three men who will constitute one-third of the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States. The three men are now selected and callers at the White House to-day received a definite impression that Justice Hughes, formerly Governor of New York, would be advanced to the Chief Justiceship; that Francis J. Swayze of the Supreme Court of New Jersey will succeed Justice Moody, who has resigned, and that Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel will take the place now held by Justice Hughes.

All these vacancies, with the exception of that to be caused by the promotion of Justice Hughes, have existed for some time, and the President has given the greatest care to selecting the men who are to fill them. Mr. Taft's long legal and judicial experience has given him a wide knowledge of men who might be considered. Expressions by Mr. Taft have indicated clearly that he considered the proper selection of Justices of the Supreme Court one of the most important of the duties of the Presidential office. It is no slur on the men he has at last selected to say that many others have been considered and that to some—a very few—the positions have been offered and declined.

It has been repeatedly said that Mr. Root had the opportunity to resign from the Senate and take his seat either as Chief Justice or as an associate Justice. That report, however, was discredited on the face of it by the fact that Mr. Root is from New York, which also claims Justice Hughes, and is now rendered still more unlikely by the fact that the resignation of Mr. Root at this juncture would mean the election of a Democratic Senator to succeed him.

There is more reason to believe that Secretary of State Knox has declined one of the Justiceships. As Attorney General under Mr. Roosevelt the Pennsylvanian acquired a knowledge that would be invaluable on the Supreme bench, while his reputation as a private practitioner of law was such as to entitle him to consideration for any judicial post. But it can be said definitely that he will not go on the bench, and with almost equal certainty that he could have gone there had he seen fit to accept the President's offer.

The ultimate choice of Mr. Hughes for the Chief Justiceship has been regarded as inevitable for a long time, though until to-day there have been conflicting reports. The New York Governor's acceptance of the post of Associate Justice caused some surprise to those who had come to consider him the most powerful Presidential candidate in sight, but on second thought it was believed that even at that early date it had been hinted to him that as soon as the Chief Justiceship became vacant he would be advanced to fill it.

Francis Joseph Swayze is still a young man. He was born in Newton, N. J., only forty-nine years ago. He received the degrees of A. B. and A. M. from Harvard, and studied law at the Harvard Law School. He was admitted to the bar in 1882, and practiced law in his native town until 1892. Then he moved to Newark and continued his growing practice there for eight years. He then became Judge of the Circuit Court and continued in that post for three years, until his advancement to the Supreme bench of his State.

For some time past Secretary of Commerce and Labor Charles Nagel has been considered a possible, if not a likely, candidate for the Supreme bench, and many of his friends have spoken of his qualifications to the President. His political activites have been recent, and before that tme he devoted himself almost exclusively to the practice of law. It was his proficiency as a lawyer that largely attracted the President's attention to him as a promising member of the Cabinet.

Mr. Nagel's education has been in some respects unusual. He is 61 years old—which is a little older than some Senators quite like—but his evidently robust constitution makes him look much younger than that, though his hair is very gray. He was born in Colorado County, Texas, and his present citizenship in Missouri gives him the right to represent on the Supreme bench the South or the Southwest.

In 1873 he was admitted to the Bar and began the practice of law as a member of the firm of Finkelberg, Nagel & Kirby. Later the firm name changed to Nagel & Kirby. From 1881 to 1883 he was a member of the Missouri House of Representatives, and, aside from his Presidency of the St. Louis City Council from 1893 to 1897, that constituted his sole political office until in 1908 he became a member of the Republican National Committee. With the accession of Mr. Taft he entered the Cabinet in his present capacity. He is a trustee of the Washington University at St. Louis and a member of the Board of Control of the St. Louis Museum of Fine Arts.

The President has also decided on the appointment of Frederick W. Lehmann of St. Louis as the Presiding Justice of the new Court of Commerce. Mr. Lehmann is one of the foremost lawyers of the West, having a large practice and having been President two years ago of the American Bar Association. He was born in Prussia, coming to the United States while a child, and was educated in the public schools in Ohio and Indiana and at Tabor College, Iowa.

He is noted for his public spirit and his interest in the various phases of the transportation question. He and the President are old friends and it is said that Mr. Lehmann is just the man to take great pleasure in the heavy task of organizing the new court, although acceptance of the honor to be offered him means no inconsiderable financial sacrifice. In politics he has been more a progressive than a regular and he always calls himself an independent Republican.

MINE EXPLOSION KILLS 13.

Five Are Blown from Mouth of the Shaft—One Rescue Effected.

DURANT, Okla, Nov. 28.—Thirteen miners were killed to-day by an explosion in the Jumbo asphalt mine, and only one of those who were in the workings at the time has been saved. The accident occurred just as the day shift was going to work.

Five men were in the cage, and fragments of their bodies were blown from the shaft, which is 290 feet deep. Nine other men had already descended. Of these Gerald Roberts was brought out to-night unconscious, but the other eight were killed. Their bodies have been recovered. Every man who lost his life was married.

The cause of the explosion has not been determined, but it is believed that gas had formed and was ignited from the lamps of the miners. The mine is a property of the Choctaw Asphalt Company of St. Louis.

ARREST IN NEW STATION.

Workman Charged with $4,500 Jewelry Theft from Pullman Car Passenger.

Charged with the larceny of jewelry valued at $4,500 from a Pullman coach in the new Pennsylvania station, Jeremiah J. Murphy, 18 years old, an electric battery workman, of 15 Ferry Street, Jersey City, was arrested at the station by Detectives Hyams and Hughes, attached to the West Thirtieth Street Station, at 2 o'clock this morning.

The jewelry, according to the police, was stolen from Mrs. Alexander McDonald of 313 West Eighty-second Street in the Pullman coach Glen Rock at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

When Murphy was searched at the police station, according to the detectives, jewelry worth about $2,000 was found in his pockets.

NO RECORD FOR DREXEL.

Barograph Shows 9,450, Not 9,970 Feet, for Point Breeze Flight.

Clifford B. Harmon, President of the National Council of the Aero Club of America, announced yesterday that the altitude record of 9,970 feet claimed by J. Armstrong Drexel at Point Breeze Park, Philadelphia, last Wednesday would not be accepted. Mr. Drexel's barograph was examined officially yesterday by Snyder Brothers and found to register 9,450 feet.

The world's record therefore still stands at 9,714 feet, made at the international meet in Belmont Park by Ralph Johnstone, who fell to death in Denver two weeks ago.

WEARY OF FINING COMPANIES.

Judge Speer Would Jail Transportation Officials for Breaking Law.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 28.—Judge Emery Speer of the United States Court, in charging a jury to-day, said the time had come to quit attempting to punish transportation companies by fines from their treasuries. Under the Sherman and Elkins acts there should be some direct punishment of the offending officials.

WANTS $100 FOR HIS APPLES.

Judge Stoddard Sues Man, Aged 77, for Robbing His Orchard.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 28.—Judge Henry Stoddard to-day started a suit against Burr S. Peck for $100 damages, claiming that Peck entered the grounds of his new home in Woodbridge and carried away apples, nuts, and other fruit without permission. The writ cites two dates on which the orchard was despoiled.

Mr. Peck is 77 years old. Two years ago he eloped with Mamie O'Brien, a waitress in a Yale student boarding house next his home on High Street. He has since sued her for divorce on the ground of cruelty. Peck's home on High Street, where he, his young wife, and his mother, who is 98 years old, reside, was to-day attached to cover the Stoddard claim.

JUDGE DILL SERIOUSLY ILL.

Jersey Jurist Who Recently Resigned a Victim of Heart Disease.

Judge James B. Dill of the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals, is seriously ill with heart disease in his home, 83 Harrison Street, East Orange. He was stricken on Friday evening after he had returned from his farm at Brookvale, Conn., where he spent Thanksgiving Day. His condition last night was reported to be slightly improved.

Judge Dill a few weeks ago offered his resignation to take effect as soon as a successor could be appointed. His term would expire next July. Before his appointment he was one of the foremost corporation lawyers of the country, being the author of standard works on the subject.

FIRE DESTROYS LUMBER YARD

Threatened Garage and Then Mrs. Theodore P. Shonts's Auto Was Stolen

A fire which had been smoldering for a long time in the stable of Walker Brothers' lumber yard, 241 West Fifty-first Street, before it was discovered by Policeman Schatsberger of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, burned out the stable and then spread to the lumber yard, where $8,000 worth of prepared lumber was piled. The lumber made a bright blaze and drew throngs returning from the theatres to the scene. There were eight horses in the stable, and when they were liberated two of them ran wildly down Broadway bfore being captured.

The fire destroyed the lumber and then spread to the bottling establishment of W. P. Gannon in the rear. This establishment was burned out, and $3,000 worth of bottled liquors destroyed.

At 241 West Fifty-first Street is the De Dion Bouton Garage. At the time there were twenty-five automobiles in the building, among them a $5,000 limousine car belonging to Mrs. Theodore P. Shonts. The automobiles were taken to the street. After the fire it was discovered that some one during the excitement had made off with Mrs. Shonts's car. First Deputy Police Commissioner Driscoll, who was in charge of the police, was indignant that it was possible to steal the car under the eyes of the police.

Fire Chief Croker said that the total damage would amount to $20,000.

BRIDGE ELEVATED TIED UP.

Accident Blocks the Line for 45 Minutes in a Rush Hour.

Elevated traffic on the Brooklyn Bridge was tied up for three-quarters of an hour at the height of the homeward rush last night. The king-pin in the forward truck of the fifth car of a Brighton Beach train broke as it was pulling out of the station at 5:15 P. M., and it was not until after 6 o'clock that traffic could be resumed on three of the four tracks. Meantime thousands walked over the bridge in the pouring rain, and the Subway and the Brooklyn trolley lines were jammed to the point of suffocation.

The breaking of the king-pin released the forward trucks of the car and they slid back to the rear trucks, at the same time jumping the track. The car was lifted two feet over the level of the platform and came down with great force, tearing away several feet of concrete along the edge of the platform. The passengers in the cars, thrown from their seats, rushed for the doors. No one was hurt in their eagerness to get to the platform, the power being promptly shut off and the train stopped.

BLACK HAND BOMB SHAKES WHOLE BLOCK

Front Windows of Tenements in Elizabeth Street Wrecked—Tenants Flee in Terror.

EXPLODES NEAR A SALOON

Francesco La Barbera, the Proprietor, Not Found, but an Employe, Who Slept Through It All, Is Held.

Every front window in eight houses on both sides of the street was shattered by a bomb which exploded this morning in front of the saloon of Francesco La Barbera, 258 Elizabeth Street. Thousands of panic-stricken Italians living in the houses fled scantily clad into the streets, splashing around barefoot in the snow and rain.

When Policeman McCarthy passed the saloon at 12:20 o'clock the doors were closed for the night and all was quiet in the street. Ten minutes later a terrific explosion shook the whole street and was heard for many blocks. Sergt. Pierce and Policeman Byrnes, at Elizabeth and Prince Streets, heard it and rushed to the scene. So did First Deputy Commissioner Driscoll, who was in his auto on the Bowery at Houston Street.

Driscoll ordered his chauffeur to follow the crowd that streamed from every house, and was soon in Elizabeth Street, which was already black with men, women, and children. Most of them were in their nightclothes, with blankets thrown over their heads.

Everywhere mothers were crying for their children, strayed in the excited throng. Many, rushing through the streets, were cut by the fragments of glass that strewed the sidewalks.

The building in front of which the bomb was placed is a four-story structure. A combination saloon and coffee house is on the ground floor with lofts above. The front door was crushed in by the explosion, and its windows, as well as the plate glass windows of the store itself, were shattered. A heavy iron grating over the cellar was twisted into a gnarled mass of ribbons and blown far into the cellar. The gas pipes there were torn from the walls and gas was escaping.

Adjoining the saloon is the grocery of L. Messina. Every window here was wrecked, as were those in Nos. 254, 256, 258, and, on the other side of the street, Nos. 263, 265, 267, and 269, all of which are small stores with tenements above.

Detective Cassetti was one of the first to reach the scene. In a rear room of the saloon, less than 50 feet from the door that had been blown in, he found Carmelo Barber, a kitchen man employed in the place, and his dog snugly sleeping near the stove, apparently the only living things in the neighborhood that had not been disturbed. Barber was taken as a suspicious person and closely cross-examined by Commissioner Driscoll and the detectives.

The reserves of the Mulberry Street Station under Capt. Walling were needed to disperse the dense throng in the streets.

The police could not find La Barbera, the proprietor, but believe that he has received threatening letters, and that the explosion was the result of his refusal to yield to the demands of blackmailers. Dozens of bombs have been set off in the block in the last two years, and it has come to be known among the police as the Bomb Belt.

PRINCETON STUDENT AT 51.

Andrew McLean Parker, Bridge Builder, Taking a Course.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 28.—Students in the biological department of Princeton University have noticed coming to classes lately Andrew McLean Parker, 51 years of age, formerly of Plainfield, N. J., but now a resident of Princeton. Mr. Parker is a well-to-do bridge builder and architect, and has become interested in lower animal life to such an extent that he has entered the course, and is a regular attendant on lectures and the experiments. He is at present occupying the Elizabethan style house of Prof. Edmund Capps, Ph. D., Yale, Professor of Classics, who is abroad for a time. The house is at 150 FitzRandolph Road.

Mr. Parker is probably best known as one of the builders of the Williamsburg Bridge in New York, and he has had other large and well-known contracts. He was graduated from Columbia University with the class of 1880, with the degree of Mechanical Engineer. He is the oldest student Princeton has had in a number of years.

Probably the only other college student in America to-day who is older is the Rev. M. L. Troutman, pastor of the First Methodist Church at Athens, Ga., who entered the University of Georgia this year at the age of 54, and was elected President of the junior class.

HE'D LIKE TO MAIL HIS CATS.

Dr. Abbott Thinks Dogs Also Should Go by Parcels Post.

Dr. Frank Abbott, an Englishman, living in Ocean View Avenue, Jamaica, Queens, wants to send live dogs and cats by mail. He can see no reason, he says, why they should not be received for transmission by parcels post.

"I lived for many years in England and English colonies," said Dr. Abbott yesterday, when he learned that some of his handsome Persian cats could not be mailed to friends, "and there enjoyed the privilege of sending by parcels post live dogs, cats, ducks, pheasants, and other things refused here in the United States. Dogs up to the weight of sixteen pounds, if properly tagged, were received without question for transmission.

"In London mail was delivered to us as early as 6 o'clock in the morning and as late as 10:15 o'clock at night. I believe the present condition in this country, with reference to its lack of proper mail facilities, is due to the machinations of the express companies. We are a trust-ridden people.

"If England can handle live dogs, cats, and fowls by mail so can the United States, if the express companies' influence can be withdrawn."

Jail Sentence for Strike Leaders.

TAMPA, Fla., Nov. 28.—In the Criminal Court to-day Jose De La Campa, Brit Russell, and J. F. Bartlum, strike leaders, recently convicted of conspiring to prevent by force striking cigarmakers from going to work in the local factories, were sentenced to a year in jail each. Notice of appeal was given. The defendants were recommitted to jail.

FEDERAL ATTACK ON SUGAR TRUST

American Sugar Refining Co., 30 Subsidiaries, and 39 Men Named for Conspiracy.

SUIT TO ENJOIN THEM ALL

Havemeyer Estate, the Spreckels, Thomas, and Atkins Among Defendants—Railroad Rebating Charged.

The long-expected suit of the United States Government against the Sugar Trust was filed yesterday by United States Attorney Wise in the United States Circuit Court of this district. It is a petition alleging a combination and conspiracy in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust act of 1890, and is directed against not only the American Sugar Refining Company proper, but about thirty other corporations and thirty-nine individuals, whose collective activities comprise those of the Sugar Trust as the Government conceives it to exist.

There are three notable features of this suit. One is that besides the American Sugar Refining Company and its more immediate and generally recognized subsidiaries, such as the Western Sugar Refining Company, the Spreckels Sugar Refining Company of California, and the Franklin of Philadelphia, the bill of complaint covers as an essential part of the alleged conspiracy and monopoly the National Sugar Refining Company of this city, which it declares was organized in its present form to help fix the control of the trust on the entire sugar trade of the United States. Hitherto it has been understood that the American Sugar Refining Company, or Sugar Trust as it is commonly known, has had an interest in the National, but it was news to many people yesterday to have the Government allege the complete measure of control indicated in the complaint.

The National Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey had $20,000,000 of stock, equally divided between preferred and common. The complaint declares that upward of $8,000,000 of preferred stock was originally issued in exchange for securities of the companies which were merged into the National and the American Sugar Refining Company.

The $10,000,000 of common stock, according to the complaint, was issued without consideration to Henry O. Havemeyer, James H. Post, and other men connected with the deal. All this stock, the complaint asserts, with the exception of $500,000 at par value, which Mr. Post retained, eventually found its way into the hands of Henry O. Havemeyer.

It is said in the complaint that Henry O. Havemeyer trusted his holdings of National Sugar common for the benefit of members of his family, but that this trusteeship was fictitious and the real ownership remained with him until his death. All of the 100,000 shares of National Sugar common have been registered on the books of the company in the name of James H. Post.

The second noticeable point is that the complaint describes and inveighs against the control of a substantial proportion of the beet sugar industry by the trust. It is asserted that the Sugar Trust has in its hands 64 per cent. of the total output of beet sugar in the United States at the present time and about 72 per cent. of the total output of refined sugar consumed in this country. The story of how a majority of the beet sugar trade of the United States was driven into the trust by means of a conspiracy between the trust and many of the great realroad lines forms one of the most interesting chapters in the Government's document.

Differs from all Other Suits.

A third important feature of this suit is one which distinguishes it from several of the precedent actions brought by the Government under the Sherman Anti-Trust act. The dissolution of the Sugar Trust is not sought by the court, either as to the New Jersey Company or its counterpart in New York, and none of the allied or subsidiary corporations are brought up for dissolution. In place of this the complaint sets forth a most elaborate statement of the business relations now involved in the trust organization, and the history of their development as constituting the monopoly and the conspiracy, which is declared to lie behind it. Having done this the Government asks relief along these lines:

That the court declare the defendants engaged in an unlawful conspiracy and perpetually enjoin them individually and as corporations, through officers, Directors, stockholders or agents, from doing any act in pursuance of the conspiracy or to carry out its purposes.

That the court adjudge the American Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey, the National Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey, and the Western Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey individually as unlawful combinations to be in restraint of inter-State trade and restrain each of these companies, their officers, Directors, and agents from engaging in inter-State or foreign commerce.

That the court declare that by reason of this conspiracy in restraint of trade, every acquisition of stock by the defendants just named in any of the other corporation defendants was unlawful, and that the holders of such stock be restrained from continuing to hold the shares or exercising any of the privileges incident to this owership; and that the issuing corporation be enjoined in exercising any of their rights or from paying or permitting to be paid any dividends on such stock.

Wants Havemeyer Trustees Enjoined

That the shares of the stock in these companies, as well as in the Utah-Idaho Sugar Company, the Great Western Sugar Company, and the Continental Sugar Company, now in the estate of the late H. O. Havemeyer, were unlawfully acquired and used by him and are now unlawfully acquired and used by the executors and trustees of his will, namely, Luisine W. Havemeyer, Horace Havemeyer, Adeline H. Frelinghuysen, and Electra H. Webb, and that the courts enjoin the trustees from exercising any of the rights incident to this stock ownership or corporating with the other defendants or with the issuing companies to suppress competition or obstruct trade and commerce.

That the defendants severally and collectively be enjoined from continuing to carry out any of the purposes of the contracts, combinations, and conspiracy which the bill sets up as constituting the illegal monopoly.

That the court should grant such temporary relief as it sees fit by way of injunction, receivership, or otherwise.

It has been generally understood since the prospcet of such a suit became definite that the Sugar Trust would, in case the Supreme Court held with the Government in the Tobacco and Standard Oil cases, in which dissolution was sought, be voluntarily dissolved and reorganized under a new plan devised to meet the Federal decision. This intention was further announced by James M. Beck, counsel for the Sugar Trust, in a statement issued yesterday after the complaint had been filed.

These are the defendants named in the bill:

Companies in Corporate Relation.

With respect to these various defendants the Government sets up in its complaint a system of corporate relationships which is brought out by this table:

Name.	Capital Stock.	Daily Melting Capacity, Pounds.
American Sugar Refining Co. of New Jersey; four plants	$90,000,000	8,750,000
American Sugar Refining Co. of New York, (stock entirely owned by American Sugar Refining Co. of New Jersey;) one plant	3,500,000	5,250,000
Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. of Pennsylvania, (stock entirely owned by American Sugar Refining Co. of New Jersey;) one plant	5,000,000	3,000,000
Franklin Sugar Refining Co. of Pennsylvania, (stock ownership as above;) one plant, not operating	5,000,000	2,000,000
Western Sugar Refining Co. of California, (one-half of stock owned by American Sugar Refining Co. of New Jersey;) one plant	1,000,000	1,500,000
National Sugar Refining Co. of New Jersey, ($5,128,000 stock owned by American Sugar Refining Co. of New Jersey and $9,300,000 stock owned by the Havemeyer family;) three plants, one not operating	20,000,000	5,900,000
Colonial Sugars Co. of Alabama, (stock owned by Cuban-American Sugar Co., which National controls;) one plant	288,100	300,000
W. J. McCahean Sugar Refining Co., Philadelphia, (one-quarter stock owned by National;) one plant	2,000,000	1,250,000

The complaint names the following as the independent cane sugar concerns.

The Revere Sugar Company of Boston, daily capacity 400,000 pounds; Warner Sugar Refining Company of Edgewater, N. J., daily capacity 700,000 pounds; Federal Sugar Refining Company of Yonkers, daily capacity 1,750,000 pounds; Arbuckle Brothers of New York, two plants, daily capacity 4,000,000 pounds; William Henderson of New Orleans, an individual, daily capacity 300,000 pounds; J. R. Norman of Alabama, an individual, daily capacity 75,000 pounds; Cunningham Sugar Refining Company of Texas, daily capacity 150,000 pounds; California and Hawaiian Sugar Refining Company of California, daily capacity 1,000,000 pounds.

Total daily melting capacity for trust, 27,950,000 pounds, for independents, 6,625,000 pounds.

The complaint states that the Sugar Trust, with a total of fourteen out of thirty-seven beet sugar companies, controlling thirty-two out of a total of sixty-six factories in the country, had an average combined output over 1907, 1908, and 1909 of about 290,000 tons a year, being 64 per cent. of the total domestic production of beet sugar.

Forming the Sugar Trust.

The formation of the original trust under the leadership, as the complaint states, of H. O. Havemeyer and Messrs. Donner, Atkins, and Thomas, who are now among the defendants, and the control through the trust of about 90 per cent. of the sugar trade in the United States, is described. The business was in the hands of trustees, and the holding corporation was known as the Sugar Refineries Company. This company, however, in 1890, was declared illegal, and the bill describes the organization in 1891 of the American Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $50,000,000 to replace it. Up to about this time there remained outside the trust the Spreckels interests on the Pacific Coast, and the complaint sets forth how a fierce and bitter war waged upon those interests, with the result that eventually Claus Spreckels, John D. Spreckels, and Adolph D. Spreckels, who owned the capital stock of the California Sugar Refining Company, entered into an agreement with the partners composing the Havemeyers & Elder firm, which resulted in the incorporation of the Western Sugar Refining Company, with a joint ownership of stock between the Spreckels and the Havemeyers & Elder interests.

This combination, according to the complaint, resulted in the closing of the factory formerly operated by the Havemeyers, a hard and fast business arrangement between the two sets of plants, and enormous profits, which are said to have reached an amount in excess of 100 per cent. annually of the capital stock of the Western Company. The Spreckelses were also operating in Philadelphia, and there was there as well the firm of Harrington, Frazier & Co., as well as the Delaware Sugar House and the firm of E. C. Knight & Co. Between 1890 and 1892, according to the complaint, merger negotiations were taken up and the control of these concerns acquired, with the result that some of them were shut down and others continued as trust concerns, with the elimination of competition.

Ready to Restrict Production.

The acquisition of the Baltimore Sugar Refining Company and its dismantlement, the acquisition of the Mollenhauer Sugar Refining Company of Brooklyn, are next set forth as a part of these early mergers, and then the complaint comes to the interesting chapter which nas to do with the formation of the National Sugar Refining Company, as it now exists. About February, 1894, it is related, James H. Post, now President of the National; Frederick H. Howell, and Thomas A. Howell, as partners; a concern known as the National Sugar Refining Company; the Mollenhauer Company, and the American Company, through Henry O. Havemeyer, made an agreement for the regulation of refined sugar production through the United States, and about the same time George H. Frazier of the Franklin Company of Philadelphia and Mr. Post entered into negotiations with William J. McCahan, for restriction of product. Then came the advent of Adolph Segal in the sugar business in 1895, with the United States Sugar Refining Company, which was bought by the American and its plant dismantled.

On Sept. 23, 1898, the complaint alleges, Henry O. Havemeyer, Charles H. Senff, and Washington B. Thomas, now President of the American Sugar Refining Company, were appointed a committee to purchase and acquire the factories of all and any independent companies throughout the country and a special committee to fix and determine the price of refined sugar throughout the United States. One of the first fruits of this arrangement in 1900 was the incorporation in New Jersey of a new National Sugar Refining Company, with a capital stock of $20,000,000, divided equally between preferred stock and common stock.

It is alleged that on May 28 of that year James H. Post entered into an unlawful agreement with George R. Bunker and other stockholders of the old National Company, whereby Post agreed to incorporate the new company and to buy at least three-fourths of the capital stock of the old company. Further agreements of the same date between Mr. Post and Claus Doscher of the New York Sugar Refining Company; between Mr. Post and F. D. Mollenhauer of the Mollenhauer Company are set forth, similarly providing for the acquisition by the purchasers of the stock of the other concerns.

Stock Falls to Havemeyer.

On June 2 the Secretary of the National Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey issued and delivered to Mr. Post its entire common stock of 100,000 shares and 82,500 shares of its preferred stock in exchange for the capital stocks of the other three companies mentioned; and Mr. Post having distributed the 82,500 shares of preferred stock to the stockholders of the old companies, delivered the hundred thousand shares of common stock to Henry O. Havemeyer, "which shares," declares the complaint, "were issued contrary to law, in violation of the corporation's franchise, and for no consideration, as said Post and Havemeyer then well knew."

On June 14 of that year, the complaint recites, H. O. Havemeyer delivered the hundred thousand shares of the common stock of the National to himself and to Lowell M. Palmer, as trustees in a voting trust, which was to be held; 76,000 shares to Henry O. Havemeyer, in trust for his children, Horace Havemeyer, Adeline H. Frelinghuysen, and Electra H. Webb. Of this trust the complaint states:

"Petitioners are informed and alleged that this trust was wholly fictitious and pretended, and the beneficial interest in such stock remained in Henry O. Havemeyer."

The other members of this trust were: Lowell M. Palmer, 10,000 shares; Washington B. Thomas, 5,000 shares; James H. Post, 5,000 shares, and John E. Parsons, 4,000 shares. The complaint declares that H. O. Havemeyer purchased the interests of Messrs. Parsons, Palmer, and Thomas, and retained all this stock until the time of his death, with the exception of 2,000 shares, acting as sole trustee by reason of the resignation of Palmer. On the books of the company, says the complaint, the entire hundred thousand shares of the common stock of the National Sugar Refining Company have stood in the name of James H. Post and remain so to-day, so the complaint asserts that during his lifetime, H. O. Havemeyer, and thereafter, his executors, have, with the American Sugar Refining Company, since June, 1900, controlled the National Company, elected its Directors, and have prevented any competition between the American Sugar Refining Company and its subsidiaries and the National Sugar Refining Company and its subsidiaries.

Some Latter-Day Offenses.

The incorporation of the American Sugar Refining Company of New York in 1901 to take over the Havemeyers' and Elders' business, and a warfare by the Western Sugar Refining Company in 1903, upon the California and Hawaiian Sugar Refining Company, which wound up by the making of an agreement whereby the latter should refrain for three years from April, 1903, from importing any raw sugar or ship, sell, or distribute through the United States any refined sugar, and permitted the Western company to market all its beet sugar product is dwelt upon.

The case of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company, which got into the control of the trust through the $1,250,000 blind loan to Adolph Segal's Champion Construction Company, this loan being secured by the stock of the Pennsylvania company, is next rehearsed.

The customs frauds are taken up, the complaint declaring that both the American Sugar Refining Company and the National Sugar Refining Company, "and certain of their respective officers" secured the entry of raw sugar at less than its true weight. Arrangements with the big railroads which have already formed the basis of successful Federal prosecution are also outlined and then the complaint continues:

"In order to further cripple competitors, destroy competition, and strengthen their monopoly, defendants have long sought unduly to control the avenues through which sugar is distributed as a part of inter-State and foreign trade and commerce. By using their great power, they have successfully demanded that brokers and other intermediaries should handle their products alone, and have forced them to treat rival products unfairly and unlawfully and for a long time they wrongfully induced members of various wholesale grocers' associations throughout the country to purchase and handle their sugar exclusively."

Beet Sugar Competition Smashed.

In 1901 the capital of the American Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey, the complaint alleges, was increased from $75,000,000 to $90,000,000, and a special committee appointed to start general warfare against the beet sugar independents with the idea of driving them out of business or getting general control. In pursuance of this conspiracy, it is said, Henry O. Havemeyer and Lowell M. Palmer entered into unlawful agreement with various railroads operating out of the cities of Boston, New York, Jersey City, and New Orleans to transport large quantities of refined sugar from the trust concerns into the territories where the beet sugar companies marketed their products.

The railroads, according to the complaint, were to give free storage to the trust's sugar and paid under the agreements between 1901 and 1904 rebates to the trust aggregating upward of $500,000, whereby the trust was enabled to sell refined sugar in competition with the beet sugar concerns at less than the cost of production.

The committee having the campaign in charge is named as consisting of Henry O. Havemeyer, Washington B. Thomas, Lowell M. Palmer, and Arthur Donner. The campaign is said to have been successful, and resulted in 1902 in an agreement between the American Sugar Refining Company and the American Beet Sugar Company, a $20,000,000 corporation, which was the largest of the independents, providing in part as follows, addressing the American Sugar Refining Company:

> You are to be our supervising agent for the disposal of our product as hereinafter stated, and for your compensation are to receive one-quarter of a cent per pound on all sugar collected for by us. * * * Your agency involves your general co-operation with us in all legitimate ways to market our product to the best advantage in such localities as we shall designate, exclusive of the New England States, care being taken by us, except when necessary, to avoid your markets.

The campaign on the beet-sugar industry was taken up in four territorial divisions, which are referred to in the complaint respectively as the Eastern group, the Colorado and Utah groups, and the Pacific Coast group. It appears from the Government's allegation that the American Sugar Refining Company has the extensive co-operation of the defendant, Charles B. Warren, in rounding up the beet-sugar companies in the Eastern States, so called, both by the methods mentioned and by organizing dummy competing companies in the various territories where the beet sugar concerns were located. They were finally brought together in the Michigan Sugar Company. The Great Western Sugar Refining Company, a $30,000,000 New Jersey corporation, the stock of which the complaint says has always been owned and controlled by the American Sugar Refining Company, or the Havemeyer family, formed a similar service in the Colorado group of companies, and the allegations of the complaint would have it appear that Thomas R. Cutler and Joseph F. Smith were the active co-operators with H. O. Havemeyer in rounding up the Utah group of companies. On the Pacific Coast the complaint says that the Spreckels Sugar Company and the American did the work.

Final Charges in the Complaint.

The complaint concludes in part as follows:

"The combination and conspiracy in which the defendants are engaged has for its purposes and objects, among others, the controlling power and direction over all persons and corporations in the United States engaged in inter-State and foreign trade and commerce in raw sugar, sugar beets, refined sugar, molasses, syrups, and other by-products of raw sugar and sugar beets * * * and to control and arbitrarily fix the times when, the places where, the amounts in which, and the prices at which raw sugar and sugar beets may be purchased, and refined sugar and other by-products may be sold, which prices are to be arbitrary and non-competitive and are to be in the case of such raw sugar and sugar beets law, and in the case of such refined sugar and by-products higher than would obtain but for the existence of such unlawful combination and conspiracy."

It is also alleged that from time to time "for the purpose of deceiving and defrauding purchasers, certain of the defendants have misbranded and sold in inter-State trade and commerce the refined sugar of others, under the pretense that the same was its own product of a particular grade or quality."

Beck Answers for the Trust.

James M. Beck, general counsel of the American Sugar Refining Company, made this statement with reference to the Government's suit against the company:

"The company's reply to the various charges will be seen when its formal answer is filed in court. For the present, it is sufficient to remind the public and the company's stockholders that the Supreme Court has already declined in a similar proceeding by the Government to hold that this company was an illegal monopoly under the Sherman law, and the court has deprecated 'the challenging of the justice of their well considered and solemn judgments.'

"The company has no monopoly in the sugar industry; it produces no raw sugar and does not and cannot control the price of the raw material; it has no agreements direct or implied with other sugar companies, and is subject daily to competition of the keenest character; it has, including its beet sugar interests, about 51 per cent. of the country's sugar trade, and it requires a liberal stretch of the imagination to call this a monopoly. It does not seek to stifle competition, or oppress the consumer by advancing the cost of a necessity of life. Its refinery profits last year averaged less than one-sixth of a cent per pound.

"During the last decade, when the prices of nearly every necessity of life have materially advanced and when the cost of this company's labor and supplies have very largely increased, it has continued to sell sugar at a lower margin of profit than formerly. In 1870 the price of granulated sugar in New York was 13½ cents a pound; in 1880, 9.8; in 1890, 5.32; in 1909, 4.76. A so-called 'trust' cannot be altogether 'bad' when its prices form so striking an exception to the general movement of commodity prices.

"These facts are mentioned because the officials of this company, while having confidence as to the outcome of the litigation, fear that some of their stockholders may be led by the present proceeding into parting with their shares at a sacrifice. The company has over 19,000 stockholders, many of whom are fiduciaries, and nearly one-half of whom are women. The average holding of its stock is about fifty shares, and its shares have long been held by thousands of investors, chiefly in New England, because of their stability and intrinsic value. These investors may be assured that, whatever the outcome of this litigation may be, this company cannot be deprived of its property.

Will Comply with the Law.

"If it appear, when the Supreme Court interprets the Sherman law in the Tobacco and Standard Oil cases, that the Sugar Company is in any respect violating the Sherman law, steps will immediately and voluntarily be taken to comply with the law as thus interpreted. This would be done if the present proceeding had never been begun. The officials of the Government are not more anxious to enforce the law than the management of this company is to obey it. It is unfortunate that business men cannot conduct a legitimate business enterprise without subjecting themselves to proceedings under a highly technical statute, about the meaning of which the courts do not agree, and about the wisdom of which most thoughtful men of all classes are in serious doubt."

$14,000 IN THE GAYNOR FUND

Chairman Crimmins Urges Prospective Contributors to Send Checks Quickly.

John D. Crimmins, Chairman of the Gaynor Hospital Fund Committee, announced at his home last night that the fund collected was slightly in excess of $14,000. He said the committee was considering the advisability of permanently endowing a bed in the Mayor's name, which would cost $5,000, and that it was desired to present a purse of $10,000 to the hospital. These purposes seem now very likely of fulfillment.

Mr. Crimmins urged that those who intended sending checks but have not yet done so should communicate with him without delay. Checks may be made payable to the order of John D. Crimmins, Chairman, or A. Barton Hepburn, Treasurer, the address of both being 135 Broadway. All checks should be sent not later than Thursday. HILL TOO PESSIMISTIC; PERHAPS MISQUOTED tions are fair and give no cause for alarm.

"Southern Minnesota, Iowa, and Nebraska have had splendid crops, and are in good business condition. This is true also of certain parts of the Northwest. Montana and Oregon have had good crops and Washington fairly good."

"Do you feel any apprehension of a financial stringency arising from political conditions, the situation in Congress, or the agitation against 'Big business'?" Mr. Schulze was asked.

"My mind is very easy," he replied. "I do believe there has been too much anti-railroad legislation. The railroads have been getting the worst of it for some time, and I think they are entitled to higher rates."

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—John J. Mitchell, President of the Illinois Trust & Savings Bank, in discussing to-day the prophecy of J. J. Hill expressed a hopefulness which was typical of the views of many careful business men. He discussed such factors as make for unsettled business as the uncertainty of the administrative attitude toward big business, and the controversy over railroad rates, but he predicted that these uncertainties would be settled shortly, while general business promised continued prosperity.

"In the first place," said Mr. Mitchell, "Mr. Hill is a railroad man, and it must be admitted that railroad men have had reason to be troubled. Aside from the railroad industry and the business of the railroad supply houses, however, the volume of business is larger than ever before. Rural communities are well fortified, for crops are large and prices are good. I see no reason to be other than confident regarding the future.

"There are many features of the situation that must be considered. While the volume of business is larger, there is less money being made. That argues that it is costing more to do business. It is costing more principally because the cost of labor is higher, and the wage earner contends that while he receives more for his work, he can buy less with what he receives.

"This is a condition probably due to general extravagance, especially of the middle classes, but I suppose people usually will be extravagant when they have the money to be extravagant with.

"From the railroad viewpoint, things have not been so encouraging as in other lines of business, and the railroads constitute a very important factor for the country's prosperity. I think it was a severe blow to the roads when the manufacturers of the country constituted the recent opposition to the proposed rate increase. Formerly attacks had been made by politicians. When made by business men they came as a surprise.

"Nevertheless, I think that public sentiment has changed during the last eight months, and that many feel that the railroads should be granted some advance in rates, as their welfare depends upon it."

ENDS 38,000-MILE PACIFIC WHALE HUNT

Prof. R. C. Andrews Brings Back Many Skeletons of Deep Sea Mammals

FOR THE AMERICAN MUSEUM

Says the Japanese Prefer Whale Steak to Beef—Leviathans Being Hunted Until They Are Scarce.

Prof. Roy C. Andrews of the American Museum of Natural History staff just has returned from a 38,000-mile trip through unfrequented parts of the Pacific Ocean. He brought many stories of thrilling experiences on land and sea, also a large number of rare specimens for the Museum collection. Prof. Andrews says that whale meat has almost superseded beef on the bill of fare of the average Japanese and that in the last ten years the whaling industry on the Coast of Japan has grown to such an extent that the whales in that part of the Pacific are in danger of becoming very scarce.

The professor says that the best cuts of whale steak retail in Japan at 12 cents a pound and that the average Japanese prefers whale to beef. In taste, he says, the whale steak is not unlike venison. It is coarser than beef. The favorite methods of cooking whale steak are broiling, frying, and baking. There will be no meat famine in Japan as long as whales hold out. Then perhaps the Japs will go back to beef.

Prof. Andrews, who made most of his journey in the United States Government ship Albatross, made an especial study of the whaling industry of Japan. He brought back the skeletons of an 80-foot sulphur-bottom whale, a 70-foot finback, a 46-foot Sei, and two killer whales, one 22 feet, the other 26 feet long, besides many specimens and a large amount of data concerning porpoises and dolphins found in the waters surrounding the South Sea Islands and the Dutch East Indies.

At least one of the porpoises captured by the professor was new to science, and several others are entirely new to the Museum collection. The professor joined the Albatross through the courtesy of the National Bureau of Fisheries, and his duty was to attend to the shore collecting among the islands visited by the vessel. The islands visited included the Philippines, Borneo, Celebes, the Molucca Islands, Formosa, Loo Choo, and Japan.

It was in February last that he completed his work, collecting hundreds of specimens of birds and animals, and turned his attention to the whaling industry on the Coast of Japan. He found many whaling stations, all operated in an up-to-date manner by the Japanese, with Norwegian gunners employed, however, for the capture of the whales. One of the largest whaling concerns there is the Oriental Whaling Company of Osaka. The professor says that the officials of this company were courteous in the extreme, and not only did all they could to further his investigations, but presented the Museum with a large number of skeletons.

Before going to Japan Prof. Andrews had made a study of the whales and whaling industry of Alaska, so he was able to compare the methods pursued in the two localities. He says that in Japan no part of the whales captured is allowed to go to waste. Every pound of flesh is eaten, the blubber refined into oil, and the bones are ground and used as fertilizer. The whalebone is used commercially. The meat of the humpbacked whale, he says, is the best for eating, although practically all kinds are used for food.

"Until ten years ago the Japanese paid little attention to the whaling industry," said Prof. Andrews. "There were some Japanese whalers before that, but ten years ago the Russians started in to catch whales off the Coast of Japan, using modern methods. Since then the industry has been brought up to date in every particular, and a great deal of money is being made.

"The Japanese have found that the best whale gunners in the world are the Norwegians, nearly every Japanese whaler having a Norwegian to operate the gun. The old method of lancing whales has given place to the modern one of firing a harpoon bomb into the big sea-animals. The bomb, filled with black powder, operated with a time fuse, is attached to the point of the harpoon. Four minutes after the harpoon enters the whale the bomb explodes, usually killing it instantly. If the bomb fails to kill, the whalers lance the animal through the lungs.

"The tail of the whale is considered the greatest delicacy by the Japanese. Some is sold raw and some is salted, as is the stomach. So great is the demand for whale meat in Japan that there is danger of a whale scarcity there in the future. While the Government allows only thirty whale ships to operate in the business in Japan, the number of whales captured is unrestricted."

During his studies Prof. Andrews discovered what he believed to be the explanation of the oil tank in the head of all sperm whales. The presence of this oil tank has always been a mystery to scientists. Twenty barrels or more of pure oil often is found in this tank. Prof. Andrews says that he believes the tank is a provision of nature to feed the whale when other food is scarce. He says that his experiments seemed to show that the oil from this tank is absorbed by the whale's body in time of food scarcity. This seemed to be borne out by the fact that in all of the thin whales captured the head tank was nearly empty of oil. In the fat ones the head tank was full.

Several whales captured while the professor was pursuing his investigations bore the marks of desperate struggles with the giant squid, or octopus, of the Pacific. These so-called devil fish form part of the food of the sperm whales. Often the monsters fight desperately, and on the jaws of several sperm whales taken were marks made by the tentacles of the octopus.

One exciting experience told by the professor happened while he was at sea on one of the Oriental Company's whale boats, a 108-ton, iron-hulled steamer, under the command of Capt. Y. E. Anderson.

"A sardine whale, some 45 tons in weight, had been shot," said Prof. Andrews. "The Captain and crew and I were on deck watching. Immediately the harpoon disappeared the whale sank. A moment later we saw the harpoon rope straighten out and hum through the water. The whale went a little way, then turned and bore straight for us. Capt. Anderson shoved his wheel hard over and tried to swing the ship's bow to meet the onrushing leviathan. But the ship did not move quick enough.

"The whale struck us on the port beam, glancing along the side, and went smash into the propellor. The ship trembled, for the whale was racing onward at 25 knots an hour. Then, with a final struggle, the beast died. Had it struck us abeam there is no doubt at all that the ship would have gone to the bottom."

On the Gillolo Islands of the Dutch East Indies Prof. Andrews found millions of parrots. When the Albatross left the islands almost every one on board had a parrot or two. He obtained several beautiful specimens of the bird of paradise. At Amboina the professor met members of a British Museum expedition, who were on their way to the wilds of New Guinea. They had with them several head-hunters from Dutch Borneo. Prof. Andrews took moving pictures of the head-hunters, but was prevented from exploring the interior of Formosa by a revolution which was in progress there.

Prof. Andrews ate his Christmas dinner last year in the Celebes, where he was entertained by the Governor, Baron Quarles de Quarles. The specimens brought back by the professor will be placed on exhibition soon.

GRAND JURY SEES NEWARK FIRE RUIN

Investigation of the Disaster Begins to Fix the Responsibility for the Loss of Life.

INSURANCE AT HIGH RATES

Records Show That It Was Listed as an Extremely Hazardous Risk—Another Body Found.

The Essex County Grand Jury began an investigation of the Newark fire horror yesterday. After a conference with Chief Justice William S. Gummere of the New Jersey Supreme Court, the jurors, in charge of Foreman Thomas J. D. Smith, went to the scene of the fire and spent several hours inspecting the ruins of the factory in which more than a score of women and girls lost their lives. After the inspection the jurors returned to the Court House to fix, if possible, the responsibility for the disaster.

While the Grand Jury was in session, Dr. Edward Steiner, the Coroner, for the first time in seven years, swore in a Coroner's Jury of six members, which will make an investigation of the fire. The jury was sworn in over the body of Carrie Robrecht of 19 Hampden Street, one of the victims of the fire. The jury consists of C. William Heilman of 22 William Street, George W. Jagle of 30 East Kinney Street, Charles E. Cameron of East Orange, William J. Hughes of 136 Littleton Avenue, Philip Lindeman, a commission merchant, and J. Martin Roll, a contractor, of South Orange. Mr. Heilman was Foreman of the Coroner's Jury that investigated the Clifton Avenue railroad disaster in 1903, which was the last time a Coroner's Jury was drawn in Essex County prior to that of yesterday. All of the jurors are well known citizens of Essex County.

After a conference the jury adjourned for ten days, when it will again meet to take evidence relating to the fire and the resulting loss of life. The responsibility for the fire, if any, will be left to the jury to determine.

Another body was identified yesterday as that of Mrs. Teresina Tartaglia, and with its identification the last of the victims that were recovered was claimed. Mrs. Tartaglia was the wife of Frank Tartaglia of Rochester, N. Y., from whom she was separated, and was a sister of Mrs. Mary Damiano, one of those who were injured in escaping from the burning factory. She leaves three small children, and worked in the factory to support them.

The number of dead is now twenty-four, for firemen found beneath a pile of débris yesterday the bones of another victim. The body may be that of an aged widow named Reynolds, who lived alone, and is believed to have been at work on the fourth floor at the time of the fire. She has not been seen since the fire, and inquiries along Central Avenue, where she was known, have failed to disclose any trace of her.

From the records of the Newark Fire Exchange it was revealed that the dangerous condition of the building was widely known. It was carried on the exchange's list as an especially hazardous fire risk. The dangerous features of the old structure, which is known to be old by the fact that the original model of the ironclad Monitor was designed in it, were listed as the open elevator shaft, non-standard floors, large area of rooms, and the height. The insurance rates on the building ranged from 100 to nearly 150 per cent. in excess of the standard rates for the same class of building.

While the firemen were searching in the ruins for his body, Roy Davidson, 18 years old, of 17 Breintnall Place, turned up at the scene of the fire yesterday and told Roundsman James Fitch, who was in charge of the squad of police guarding the ruins, that he was overcome with horror at the sight he witnessed and ran home.

One of the most important witnesses to appear before the Coroner will be Deputy Factory Inspector William Schlachter, in whose district the factory building was situated. Speaking of the disaster he said:

"I can't understand it," said Schlachter yesterday. "It doesn't seem possible under conditions as I found them at the time of my last visit to the factory that under any circumstances would there have been any trouble in getting out of the place.

Several funerals of the fire victims were held yesterday morning and afternoon. The three Gottlieb sisters, Dora, Minnie, and Tillie, daughters of Morris Gottlieb of 74 South Sixteenth Street, East Orange, were buried together. A simple Jewish religious service was conducted by the undertaker, while the aged father, the surviving four sisters, and one brother, stood in a mournful group.

Following an examination made in Trenton yesterday of factory department records relative to the fire, Gen. Lewis T. Bryant, State Labor Commissioner, and several Newark inspectors asserted that the fire protection was adequate, so far as the State law was concerned, and if it could be proved that additional protection might have saved life there, the fault would be with the law itself rather than with the administration of it.

INSANE YOUTH ADRIFT.

His Oarless Boat Was Awash When Police Boat Discovered Him.

Searchlights of the Harbor police boats along the East River last night, flashed in response to an alarm sent by Supt. William Mabon of the Manhattan State Hospital for the insane on Ward's Island for an inmate who escaped from there at noon, brought to view a flat-bottomed rowboat, half swamped and without rudder or oars. The boat, just west of Little Hell Gate was rocking in a heavy swell from the Sound steamers which just had passed. As the swell subsided there arose from it an athletic young man in a brown uniform. He climbed into the rocking boat, aimlessly drifting toward the Sound, and with arms akimbo, sat down on the swamped bottom.

When the police reached the boat, the young man tried to explain his brown uniform, which is the regulation garb of the patients at the Insane Asylum, by saying he was an orderly of a Long Island sanitarium on his way back after a shopping tour in the city. Later, however, he confessed with evident pride to a string of wrong-doings, to Lieut. Darcy.

He said he was Benjamin Sam of 39 West 118th Street, the eighteen-year-old son of Mrs. Augusta Sam. On Sept. 5, he said, he tried to rob a house in Brooklyn, but after he had removed his shoes was surprised by the family and fled barefoot into the street. Immediately, he said, he entered and robbed the house adjoining. While in that house he donned a woman's gown he found in one of the rooms, and made his way out. On the street, however, he was surprised, and after a struggle was captured. He said he gave the name of Gus Edwards when he was brought to trial.

"My people had influence and kept me from going to Elmira," he said. "They had me adjudged insane and sent to the asylum instead. I acted as if insane and thought it a great joke. While I was at the hospital I pulled off another little job by robbing one of the attendants of $3."

At the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane it was said last night that Sam was committed to the King's Park Hospital on Sept. 9 and transferred to the main hospital on Oct. 23.

Sam said he got tired of playing insane at the asylum, and while rummaging yesterday morning in the paint shed discovered a small rowboat with no oars. He put the boat under a wooden extension that runs into the river and concealed himself in it until dark. He then pushed off, he said, using the rudder as a paddle. He intended to hug the shore till he reached the northern end of the island and then push across to Long Island, and, trusting to get to Boston, where he had worked several years ago as a page in a hotel. He said he would have escaped if the swell from the steamers had not swamped his boat, compelling him to jump overboard, abandoning his rudder-blade.

The police sent him back to the insane asylum.

PARLIAMENT IS DISSOLVED

New Parliament to Assemble on Jan. 31—Belief That Asquith's Majority Will Be Reduced.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—With the dissolution of Parliament to-day all the formalities preliminary to the election of a new Parliament were completed. The proclamation of dissolution summoned the new Parliament to assemble on Jan. 31, 1911.

The Parliament dissolved to-day was the second of the reign of the late King Edward, and met last Feb. 15. It was dissolved in pursuance of the programme of the Liberal Government to go before the country on the question of the veto power of the House of Lords.

The King's speech was notable for its brevity, the only reference to the constitutional crisis being a colorless expression of regret that the conference between the leaders of the opposing controlling parties had failed to reach an agreement over the reformation of the Upper House.

The longest and most interesting paragraph, which immediately followed an allusion to the death of King George's father, dealt with the recent arbitration of the Newfoundland fisheries dispute with the United States. It read:

> I confidently hope that the questions connected with the North Atlantic fisheries between Canada and Newfoundland on the one hand and with the United States of America on the other, which have been the subject of controversy for nearly a century, have been at last finally settled by the award of The Hague Tribunal. It is a cause of special satisfaction that it has been found possible to solve by arbitration problems of such an intricate and difficult nature, and that the award has been received by both sides in a spirit which must tend to increase good-will.

Among the first of the members of the new Parliament to be elected unopposed will be the Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, the Opposition leader, the Liberals having decided not to contest his seat for the City of London.

On the Stock Exchange, where regular dealings have been instituted in bets on the general election, the feeling to-day seemed to anticipate a reduction of the Liberal majority.

In Ireland the struggle is growing more bitter every day. A meeting of delegates representing every Ulster constituency was held in Belfast to-day, and a resolution was adopted on the motion of a Presbyterian minister to draw up a solemn declaration refusing to pay rates or taxes imposed by a Dublin Parliament or to obey its decrees.

Fifty thousand dollars was subscribed on the spot to organize the Ulster men into regiments and to purchase arms.

At night a monster Unionist demonstration was held in Ulster Hall, Belfast, an overflow meeting of 20,000 persons being held in the open air. At both meetings there was the greatest enthusiasm. Lord Londonderry declared that American dollars enabled John Redmond to hold Premier Asquith in the hollow of his hand. If a Home Rule Parliament were established, he said, it might be found that Ulster would refuse obedience to the law.

Sir Edward Carson, ex-Solicitor General and now Conservative member of Parliament for Dublin University, said they would never consent to their country being sold for American dollars. The Right Hon. Walter Hume Long, M. P., spoke in a similar strain, and other speakers advocated stern resistance to the law if Home Rule were forced upon Ulster.

The first independent woman suffrage candidate is announced in the person of an advocate, who will contest a division of Glasgow.

The Socialist Party has decided to run a third candidate in Battersea, thus seriously endangering the Right Hon. John Burns's chance of re-election.

Suffragists created serious disturbances at a meeting at Lambeth to-night, at which the Right Hon. Winston Spencer Churchill was speaking. After several men had been thrown out Mr. Churchill strongly denounced the suffragist tactics and said: "I am told that individuals are to be singled out for violence. If that is their language there is only one answer, and that is, 'Come on.'"

The Parliament which was dissolved yesterday, one of the shortest in duration in a century, was elected last January, following the decision of the House of Lords to submit the budget introduced by Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George to the will of the people. Previous to the general election Premier Asquith, in the House of Commons elected in 1906, had an enormous majority—no fewer than 334, including the Labor members and Irish Nationalists.

The general election of last Winter resulted in the return of the Liberal Government to power with a much reduced majority—a majority, indeed, that consisted of only two members outside the Laborites and the Irish. The figures were as follows:

Liberals	275
Labor members	40
Nationalists	71
Independent Nationalists	11
Unionists	273

The result of the general election was accepted by the House of Lords as an indorsement of the budget on the part of the people and the measure on reintroduction was quickly passed. Mr. Asquith and his followers, however, declared that a situation such as had arisen between the two houses must not occur again and that the enormous discrepancy between the strength of the Unionists and the Liberals in the House of Lords made futile any legislation a Liberal Government might introduce and pass in the Commons with which the Lords chose to disagree. The death of King Edward and the Veto Conference which it was one of the first acts of King George to propose posponed the crisis, but the failure of the conference to reach an agreement made the dissolution of Parliament inevitable.

The struggle is regarded on all sides as the most serious in the United Kingdom since the fight over the reform bill, if not since the days of Charles I.

IRISH ASK MORE DOLLARS.

United Irish League of America Issues an Appeal for Funds.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—The members of the United Irish League of America, determined to meet squarely the issue of "American dollars" raised by the Unionists in the campaign just begun for the election of a new British Parliament, to-day issued an appeal for funds to be sent to Ireland to assist the Nationalist Party. This action was taken at a meeting held here to-day by the Boston members of the National Executive Committee of the league, including T. B. Fitzpatrick, National Treasurer, and John O'Callaghan, National Secretary. In its appeal the committee says:

"Ireland's claim for Home Rule stands in the forefront in what is destined to be the most memorable general election in the political history of the last two centuries in Great Britain. The demand for Irish Home Rule is linked inseparably with the demand of the masses of the British people for the reforms which they have so long and so vainly demanded.

"In its desperation the House of Lords has been driven as a last effort to save itself from extinction to cry out that its destruction is being wrought by the aid of 'American dollars.' The campaign cry that 'American dollars' are about to wreck the British Constitution is, of course, simply meant as a catch-cry for the purpose of defeating the forces of progress. But the fact remains that 'American dollars,' contributed to sustain and strengthen the Irish Party in this contest, are going to play an important part in the result of the struggle."

Liverpool Cotton Firm in Trouble.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 28.—Forwood, Crump & Co., cotton merchants, announced to-day that they had placed their books in the hands of a public accountant.

POTTER'S JOB NOT SURE.

His Appointment to the Ambulance Board Only Temporary, Says Mayor.

Mayor Gaynor said yesterday that he wishes it made clear that the appointment of Dr. Daniel C. Potter, the former pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, who has occupied a good deal of space in the newspapers in the last few years, as Director of the new Board of Ambulance Service, is purely a temporary one. He said that the question of whether or not the place shall be exempted from the civil service has not yet been decided by the Municipal Civil Service Commission. He added that he has not yet made up his own mind on the point, but will take it up immediately with the commission.

When asked if he was aware of the charges that have been made against Dr. Potter at various times, the Mayor replied:

"I heard the story that a fund of $6,000 had been collected among charitable institutions and presented to him when he was the head of the Charitable Institutions Division of the Department of Finance. I investigated this through my Commissioner of Accounts and found that it was not true. Such a fund was talked of, but some one said that it would hardly be proper and the movement was dropped."

Controller Prendergast said yesterday that he has not yet completed the investigation of the Charitable Institutions Division, which he began before Dr. Potter resigned as its head.

It is known that strong support of Dr. Potter has been given by several prominent men in the city who are active in charitable work.

FALL MADE BABY DUMB.

Crawled Through the Balustrade in Its Home—Owner Must Pay $10,000.

A jury in the Supreme Court yesterday brought in a verdict of $10,000 in the suit to recover for injuries suffered by Charles Bence when he was 2 years old. Charles was one of seven brothers and sisters, and lived in 1907 with his mother on the third floor of 642 East Fourteenth Street.

An upright was missing in the hallway balustrade, and through the aperature the baby crawled and fell, striking two floors below with such force that his skull was fractured, the child being rendered dumb by the pressure of bone upon the brain.

POSITIONS FORTIFIED BY MEXICAN REBELS

Fight Near Chihuahua on Sunday Not a Complete Defeat for the Insurgents.

MADERO SAFE AND UNHURT

It Is Believed the Campaign Will Continue—A Printer's Boy Imprisoned for Saying Madero Could Win.

CHIHUAHUA, Nov. 28.—The Government troops have returned to Chihuahua after their fight with revolutionists four miles west at Fresno yesterday.

Two thousand reinforcements are expected before the Government resumes its attempt to reopen the Mexico & Northwestern Railroad, which is tied up as a result of the fight.

The insurrectionists are said to have been reinforced by bands from Parral. They now number 1,000, and they have fortified positions at various points. Lively fighting is expected when the campaign starts.

Yesterday's fight was the first real fight of the insurrection in this part of Mexico. Three hundred insurgents attacked the Government's rear guard of 400 troops, who were marching along the Mexico & Northwestern (Chihuahua & Pacific) Railroad. Seven dead insurrectos were brought in last night and were viewed to-day at Police Headquarters.

The Government lost one killed and seven wounded. The fight lasted three hours, both sides taking shelter behind boulders and in ditches.

The rebels' presence was a surprise. The troops left Chihuahua yesterday morning, led by Gen. Navarro, with the intention of regaining the towns along the railroad line, no trains having been operated since last Tuesday. Their ultimate destination was Minaca. Four miles from Fresno the insurrectionists, mounted, awaited them in concealment behind the hills. The rebels allowed the cavalry and a detachment of infantry to pass without disclosing their presence. Later the rear guard, with a number of women and children, appeared, and the insurrectos opened fire. The troops retreated in good order into the valley, firing steadily, and the insurrectos were then gradually driven from behind stone fences and corrals.

A courier was dispatched as the battle opened to call back the main body of troops. When the troops returned the insurectos galloped west in good order, disappearing in the cañons. If they had any wounded they took them away.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 28.—No news of disturbances in any part of the country reached Mexico City to-day.

Preparations for the inauguration of President Diaz and Vice President Corral on Dec. 1 are nearing completion. They include elaborate illuminations and decorative effects in the business quarter and in the Alameda.

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 28.—That Francisco I. Madero, leader of the Mexican revolution, is safe and uninjured is the news brought to his family to-day by a courier, who came direct from Madero to San Antonio.

The courier said that Madero was at present gathering his forces in the Laguna district, near Lerdo and Parral. This district lies in a fertile valley, surrounded by mountains.

EL PASO, Nov. 28.—According to staff correspondents of The El Paso Herald, who returned here last night, there are prospects of further trouble in the affected Mexican districts of Chihuahua and Durango. They declare that 90 per cent. of the natives in that part of Mexico are against the Diaz Government, and that those not openly supporting the revolutionists are passive. They also state that the revolutionist army is not made up of peons and bandits, as has been reported, but consists of native railroad employes, farmers, mechanics, and others. The insurrectos appear to have plenty of arms and ammunition, and also seem to have plenty of money behind them.

Both correspondents agree that the insurrectos have not been conquered, but only driven into the mountains. Desultory fighting is expected to continue, and there have been several small fights within the last few days.

LAREDO, Texas, Nov. 28.—Nuevo Laredo postal and customs officers to-day seized 300 pistols, which came from the United States by registered mail. The weapons had been accumulating for several days. They were returned to this country to-day with the statement that they constituted prohibited importations into Mexico.

A prominent American officer to-day received an anonymous letter, written in Spanish, stating that if he did not desist in his efforts on behalf of the Mexican Government he would be killed.

The officer desires that his name be not published. He takes the threat as a joke, but several friends have warned him to exercise the utmost caution.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Nov. 28.—Passengers arriving to-day from Guaymas, Mexico, report a small uprising of Yaqui Indians at Bacum on the Yaqui River. In a skirmish three days ago three Yaquis were killed and one was wounded.

Advices from Chihuahua say that revolutionists, after engagements at Guerrero, have taken a stand at Perdenales, where a combat is expected with Government troops sent out by Jefe Politico Zoa.

ROADS DIVIDE ON RATES.

Eastern Lines Against Western for Commission's Power Over Rates.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission listened to-day to the arguments of a score of lawyers representing the leading trunk lines of the country on the fourth section of the new Inter-State Commerce act in regard to the long and short haul problem. The commission had formulated its questions in a circular sent out to the railroads several weeks ago. The discussion dealt with the question whether import and export rates, transshipment rates, proportional rates, excursion rates, and commutation rates were to be regulated by the new law. There appeared for the first time within recent years a distinct division between the representatives of Eastern and Western roads in the view taken on the question that import and export rates were to come within the jurisdiction of the commission.

The Eastern men contended that the commission could not touch such rates because Congress had not given it any authority over the steamship lines or foreign commerce, and there was no means of telling what proportion of such rates went to the steamship companies and what to the railroads. The Western men representing roads that are not very much concerned in this line of traffic, expressed the opposite view, and said that it was practically an easy matter to require the roads that enjoyed any proportional earnings to report just what and how much such earnings were, and then this deducted from the aggregate would show what the steamship companies received, and thus would establish the proportional rates between the two carriers.

The argument of counsel continued all day, and the Western lines represented included the Union Pacific system, the Southern Pacific, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Great Northern, and the Northern Pacific. The Eastern and Southeastern roads were headed by the Pennsylvania system.

CAPT. LIEBERS CONVICTED.

Commissioner Cropsey Finds Him Guilty of Neglect—Says He Lied.

After a grilling by Police Commissioner Cropsey at Headquarters yesterday Capt. George C. Liebers of the Bronx Park Station was found guilty of neglect of duty, failing properly to investigate the injuring of a prisoner, and making an improper statement to Deputy Commissioner Driscoll.

From the time the Captain took the stand until his examination was concluded the Commissioner fired questions at him until beads of perspiration stood out on the Captain's forehead. When he made known his finding the Commissioner said:

"Any intelligent human being who has heard the Captain testify must come to the conclusion that he has been telling untruths. I believe he has been lying, because other witnesses, and pictures taken the day after this man was beaten, show cuts on his nose, lips, chin, and ears. I find the Captain guilty, and will make known my further determination later. As for the four patrolmen who testified for him, I don't believe a word they said here. They have no business on the force. I will remember them later."

On the night of Nov. 8 Ernest and Walter Howells, electricians living at 162 West 120th Street, got into a row with Special Policeman Nicholas Langley in the Bronx terminus of the Subway. Walter's face was cut and four teeth knocked out before the brothers were locked up in the Bronx Park Station. Some one told Deputy Police Commissioner Driscoll, who had Howells's injuries photographed. Driscoll asked Capt. Liebers how serious the man's injuries were, and was told that the man was not hurt at all, and that there were no marks on his face. This caused Deputy Commissioner Driscoll to bring Liebers up on charges.

GERMAN BANK SUSPENDS.

Vereinsbank of Frankfort-on-Oder to be Helped by Dresdner Bank.

FRANKFORT-ON-THE-ODER, Nov. 28.—The Vereinsbank suspended to-day pending an examination of its affairs by an auditing company. A run on the institution began last Wednesday, since which time depositors had withdrawn $625,000, the exact amount of the capital. The deposits totaled $1,250,000.

It is stated that the bank invested too heavily in the mortgages of land companies.

The Dresdner Bank has agreed to assist the Vereinsbank through its difficulties.

GAMBLERS APPEAL TO MAYOR GAYNOR

Tell Him That Some of Driscoll's Raid Detectives Have Been Guilty of Grafting.

DEMANDED MONEY, THEY SAY

The Mayor Assures Them That a Thorough Investigation Will Be Made—Lieut. Cody Accused.

Several men, said to be gamblers, called on Mayor Gaynor at the City Hall yesterday and complained that detectives attached to the staff of First Deputy Police Commissioner Clement Driscoll had tried to extort money from them and used unnecessary force when they recently raided several clubs alleged to be gambling houses.

Open charges of accepting graft were made against Lieut. Cody in particular. Cody and a detective named Murphy have been more active with Driscoll than any of the other sleuths in getting evidence against gambling houses, and they have figured in all the recent raids. As the result of the charges Mayor Gaynor has promised to make an investigation. Cody denied last night that there was any truth in the charges.

Two of the men who got in to see the Mayor were Samuel Newmark and Martin Bernstein. They particularly complained about the actions of Cody and Murphy last Friday night, when both, with Commissioner Driscoll, visited the Lusitania and Cornwall Clubs, on the second floor of 107 West 116th Street. That was the night Commissioner Driscoll went to the clubs with a warrant for a certain individual, and when denied admittance got a squad of policemen from the West 125th Street Station.

Instead of raiding the clubs, however, the Deputy Commissioner left the policemen in a hallway while he went to a fire. He returned in time to see the men inside the rooms file peaceably out. Then Driscoll and the members of his vice squad went through the rooms.

Newmark and Bernstein told the Mayor that as they were leaving the place Cody and Murphy appeared with drawn blackjacks, and Newmark said he was struck over the head and Bernstein added that some one hit him on the wrist. Driscoll, they said, walked up and down the corridor with a revolver in his hand. They said the club was a social affair, and that the police had no business there.

Cody, one of the men said, called to his men to arrest Newmark and Bernstein, and when the two objected angrily Driscoll came in and whispered to Cody. Then Driscoll, they said, turned to them and told them "to get out and hurry up about it."

They reminded the Mayor that Cody figured prominently in the Bertha Claiche murder case some years ago. The Claiche girl was tried for the murder of Emil Gendron, a Frenchman, whom she shot on the street. It was brought out that the shooting was done with Cody's revolver. Cody was dismissed from the force, but was reinstated. Another policeman who was concerned in the affair was sent to Sing Sing.

Bernstein and Newmark told the Mayor they had heard that for some time Cody had been demanding $50 a week as "protection" money from several gamblers. The men, they said, were running poolrooms. They said that some time ago Cody had gone to Louis Kaufman, who is alleged to have kept a poolroom at Third Avenue and Thirteenth Street, and demanded a loan of $500. Kaufman, they said, told him that he didn't have the money, but suggested that his partner, Sam Paul, might accommodate him. Paul, they said, told Cody that he had only $300 and that he thought there ought to be some security for the loan. Cody, they declared, then produced a ring with a large white stone as security and that the ring afterward proved to be glass and worth about 60 cents.

The Mayor listened to what his visitors had to say with the closest attention. When they had finished he told them they would have every oportunity to prove their charges and that if the charges were true they needn't fear any harm for having told him. He asked them to produce as quickly as possible those alleged to have paid protection money.

When the men came out of the Mayor's office they were joined by a score of others who had waited in the hall outside. One of these was "Eddie" Reardon, who was attached at one time to District Attorney Jerome's staff and got into disfavor with the authorities in connection with numerous raids he made on gambling houses. One of the Mayor's visitors said he was a produce merchant and had gone to the Cornwall Club to collect a bill when he fell into the hands of Cody and Murphy.

"If any one has any charges of graft against a policeman they ought to make them direct to me," said Driscoll. "I will make a full investigation and do my best to get at the bottom of it. I do not place much dependence in what the Mayor's visitors had to say. They are the class of men who cannot get any one to listen to their absurd charges and so have to go to the Mayor. The Mayor has said nothing to me about the matter, and I don't suppose he will, for the matter will have to come before Commissioner Cropsey."

"The charge that I accepted graft is a lie," said Cody. "The whole thing is absurd. The men who are behind this are the same who tried to get me in trouble before. On one occasion I was brought up on charges of a similar nature, but the case was thrown out of court. I am not worried in the least."

STEAMSHIP LOBBY HARD TO CORNER

Congressional Committee Fails to Get Any Information in a Tussle with Capt. Norton.

WITNESS HEARD OF ONE

Officers of Foreign Lines Operating Here to be Examined on the Question To-day.

The special committee appointed by Congress to investigate the charges that foreign steamship companies operating to the United States maintain a lobby in Washington to defeat legislation that might encourage American shipping began its sessions yesterday in the Custom House. Congressman J. Van Vechten Olcott of New York is Chairman of the committee, the other members being Congressmen Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, F. J. Garrett of Tennessee, Benjamin G. Humphreys of Mississippi, and Willis C. Hawley of Oregon. Congressmen Humphreys and Hawley were not present at the hearing. Mr. Hawley will be on hand to-day, but it is doubful when Mr. Humphreys will join the committee, as he is ill at his home in Mississippi.

The hearing is the outgrowth of a previous investigation in which the question of alleged foreign steamship lobbying came up. In that investigation there was disclosed what purported to be a pooling arrangement by foreign shipping companies and the committee will try and find out what effect, if any, this arangement has had on American shipping. The charges originated, it was said, with the Merchants' Marine League of Cleveland, Ohio, which alleged that a steamship pool had been active in the defeat of ship subsidy legislation in Congress.

The only witness examined yesterday was Capt. George L. Norton, editor of the Marine Journal of this city. He was asked to explain various editorials and other articles that had appeared in his paper. He described his paper as one devoted to the interests of American shipping and said that it carried no foreign shipping advertisements.

When pressed by the committee to name some Congressman with whom he was on terms of friendship and who might have told him things about shipping legislation, Capt. Norton finally stated that the late Congressman Timothy J. Campbell used to see him in his office, but he did not remember the Congressman having told him anything about the lobby or that it had had any effect on his colleagues in the years he was a member of Congress.

It was Congressman Campbell who in a famous interview with the late President Cleveland asked the historic question, "What's the Constitution between friends?" after Mr. Cleveland in referring to something that Mr. Campbell wanted him to do had pointed out that to do so would be unconstitutional.

Capt. Norton had to listen to the reading of editorials from his paper, in one of which it was stated that if Congress probed deep enough the existence of a lobby fund would be discovered.

"Now do you know of any domestic or foreign steamship companies having raised a lobby fund to influence legislation in any way?" asked Mr. Olcott.

"I can say emphatically that I never knew of any lobby fund, but I heard of one," answered Capt. Norton.

"You have said that members of Congress have taken favors from steamship companies; do you know of any such Congressman?"

Capt. Norton admitted that he could not remember the name of any Congressman who had accepted such favors. The witness said he believed there were Congressmen in the Middle West who are interested in newspapers that carry foreign shipping advertisements, but he did not know who the Congressmen were; neither was he able to tell the name of a single newspaper in that part of the country that carried such advertisements. He said in answer to a question by Congressman Longworth that he did not know the name of a Congressman, nor was he able to give the name of any man, either in public or private life, who would be in a position to testify with reference to the alleged lobby.

"Do you think it fair," asked Mr. Garrett, "to publish an article like this in your paper and then refuse to give us information that would enable us to put the probe in deep, as you suggest?"

Capt. Norton denied having said in a conversation last Summer that it was a common thing for Congressmen to make two or three free trips to Europe each year, and likewise said he was not familiar with any "Black Horse Cavalry" organization in Congress, and had never made a remark of that nature to any one.

The committee finally gave up the effort to get anything out of the witness and adjourned the hearing until 2 o'clock this afternoon, when John W. Dodsworth, editor of the Journal of Commerce, and ex-Congressman William H. Douglas will be examined. Others who have been subpoenaed are Herman Winter of the North German Lloyd Line, Emil L. Boas of the Hamburg-American Line, Lawson Sanford, Secretary of the Atlantic Steamship Conference, and William E. Corwin of the Merchants' Association.

DARK DAYS AHEAD FOR ROGEL'S FAMILY

Dispossessed from Their Home and the Eight Children in a Starving Condition.

FATHER ONCE WORTH $60,000

Friends Say He Was Too Generous, and a Daughter Thinks He Was Swindled.

There were whisperings all over the Brownsville section of Brooklyn yesterday when its dwellers read in the newspapers about the dispossessing of Isaac Rogel, with his wife and eight starving children, from his home at 17 Chester Street, and the collapse from starvation of the oldest son in the street while their effects were being removed.

"He was a rich man only two years ago," they said. "Where did it go?"

And there were others who had their answer to the question. They said that the old man was too trusting in his business dealings, and spoke of papers in various transactions that he signed, although it was well known that he could not recognize his own name when it was put down before him in writing. They also say he was too generous for his own good and lent money that he never will see again.

There is no use now in asking Rogel anything about his business transactions. He can't tell about them. Ever since they put him out of the Roosevelt Palace Hall in Rockaway Avenue, which he had run as a refreshment garden, with a hall to let for weddings and entertainments, he began to be a silent man.

Then he gathered his resources and had plans made for a Turkish bath and assembly hall at Chester Street and East New York Avenue, on which plot his house faced. They got as far as making the excavation, which extends half over the block in East New York Avenue. Then he began to have trouble. The work was halted and never taken up again. He could not get the money that had been promised and the last of his own money had been sunk in the venture.

Some time ago, his daughter says, he began to have pains in his head. For weeks at a time he wandered the streets with the blue prints of his contemplated building in his pocket, and his walks always ended at the side of the excavation.

What has become of his money he does not know. Two years ago he had a good business, supported his family well, and kept a driving horse. He was known all over Brownsville for a generous man, and, as Capt. Frank of the Brownsville Police Station said yesterday, "when he was well-to-do there was no one who could not get his help."

His eldest daughter, Miriam, the 16-year-old little mother of the family of eight children, knows something about his business affairs. But she is helpless.

"If father could only do it," she said yesterday, "there is money belonging to us that we could get. But he cannot think or even talk for any time now, and wants to go to a hospital. My mother also is ill." Miriam does not hesitate to say that her father has been swindled out of money and gives the names of persons whom she believes are concerned. She thinks the family is in need of the services of a trained business man or a lawyer who will investigate their affairs.

For some time the neighbors of the Rogels have known that they were in difficulties. The little two-story dwelling from which they were evicted was once owned by Rogel. But he could not pay interest on the mortgage and it was foreclosed several months ago, but the family was permitted to stay there for several months. For four months Harris Schwartz, who keeps a little grocery store a few doors away, has been letting them cook their food in his house because they could not pay for fuel. The neighbors have taken up subscriptions, and almost all the storekeepers in the section, together with many residents, contributed small sums when a few weeks ago a committee of two women went around to raise money for them. The neighbors tell of shocking conditions of poverty under which the eight children have lived.

"Rogel had more than $40,000 when he came to Brownsville four years ago," said one storekeeper, "and he was considered one of the most prosperous men here. He must have been worth $60,000 two years ago."

When the movers were bringing their furniture out of the house little eleven-year-old Abraham, the oldest son, suddenly sank to the sidewalk. An ambulance was called from St. Mary's Hospital and the boy was taken away. The police slip said he was "suffering from starvation."

The family had no place to go, and apparently the father had no solution of the difficulty. An old friend, Marcus Pally, appeared on the scene and immediately hired a van, in which the furniture was moved to a flat on the top floor of 1,821 Pitkin Avenue. Pally paid the rent there for a month.

Yesterday afternoon Miriam was in charge of the house. Her mother spent the day at the hospital with Abraham, and the father was off somewhere on one of his rambles over the neighborhood. She said that early in the day he had fallen on the floor from weakness, and that she had had a hard time reviving him.

These contributions were received yesterday from readers of THE TIMES for the family:

Philchar, $5.

Joseph C. Levi, $2.

Besides the house in which he lived Rogel is known to have owned a house in Osborn Street. He also held several mortgages which were exchanged for the lot on which he planned to build his Turkish bath building. The family once lived at 1 Essex Street, Manhattan. Rogel was in business then as a fish dealer before he went to Brownsville. The children of the family are Miriam, 16; Fanny, 13; Abraham, 11; Charles, 9; Rose, 7; Bernard, 5; Frank, 3, and Sylvia, 2.

ANOTHER CUSTOMS ARREST.

Woolen Goods Dealer Held on Charges of Fraud—Over $100,000 Involved.

Clarence A. Walters, a member of the firm of John F. Brigg & Son, dealer in woolen goods, at 43 East Nineteenth Street, was arrested yesterday on the charge of having been concerned in a series of undervaluation frauds aggregating more than $100,000. The prisoner, when arraigned before United States Commissioner Shields, was placed under $10,000 bail and the examination was set for Thursday.

The complaint in the case was made by William H. Williams, a customs agent, who charges that Walters on Jan. 3 last "wilfully and knowingly effected the entry at the Custom House of a case of woolen cloth imported from abroad upon a false classification as to the value of the merchandise and the payment of the amount of duty legally due thereon by means of a fraudulent and false invoice, affidavit, and paper."

Because of the presentation of the false entry papers, Williams says that the Government was defrauded out of the full amount on that particular shipment. He states further that his information concerning the series of frauds which he alleges were perpetrated by Walters was obtained through an examination of the papers on file at the Custom House and of the invoice in the possession of John F. Brigg & Son.

$6,000 for Her Wounded Affections.

Tillie Seraphim, a dark-haired girl of 19, received $6,000 damages before Justice Finelite in the City Court yesterday in a breach of promise action brought against Maurice Smith, a dancing master. She testified that she had come to America from Russia on his promise to marry her. The verdict was the largest in a case of this character ever brought in by a City Court jury.

EXPRESS STRIKE MAY BE RENEWED

Young Men in Several Companies Insisting on a Closed Shop—Older Men Satisfied.

CONFERENCES ARE GOING ON

Restless Ones Expect Employers to Yield in the Face of Christmas Rush—Wages and Hours Conceded.

Apprehension of a renewal of the express strike during the Christmas holidays, when the express business is at its height, it was said yesterday, has not been removed. The officials of all the express companies in the city are making efforts to maintain peace, but a large element among the drivers and their helpers are likely to force the issue within the next week or two. Older heads among the employes are trying to hold the "insurgents" in check. Developments during the next few days will determine whether or not a strike will be called.

A number of conferences have been held between representatives of the drivers and express company officials, but nothing has been decided. Some drivers are holding out for the recognition of the union and the closed shop. The express companies are determined not to grant this under any conditions. They are willing to make concessions relating to hours and pay.

"The situation is still grave, but we hope to get over the holidays without a strike," said an official of one of the companies yesterday. "Nothing will be decided for several days yet, for important conferences between the drivers and the officials are going on all the time. All the companies have received delegations of their men and have talked the question of hours and wages over. The trouble is that a number of the younger men among the drivers are anxious to seize the opportunity when there will be an extra amount of express matter to handle to force the demand for a closed shop. They do not care about wages or hours. On the other hand there is a large element among the men who do not want to strike at all. If these men can restrain the others and advise them to accept the concessions which the express officials are willing to grant, everything will continue to be peaceful."

Superintendent J. R. Christee of the American Express Company had a conference yesterday with a representative of his company's drivers. This conference had been agreed upon by both sides when the strikers went back to work about two weeks ago, as the companies were anxious to have a thorough understanding reached before the heavy Christmas traffic set in.

"I will give you drivers overtime if you will give the company undertime," was Superintendent Christie's ultimatum yesterday on one point at issue. He explained that this meant that he thought it only fair if the company had to pay for a few hours' extra work that the men who were dissatisfied ought to agree not to ask for pay during their vacations, when on sick leave, and when they were receiving pensions. Charles Benjamin, who was spokesman for the drivers, said he would submit the proposal to the employees.

In order to find out just what the strikers wanted Superintendent Christie recently sent every wagon driver and helper a copy of a letter in which he said:

> Those of you who have been with the company a number of years, we think, fully appreciate, without a word of explanation, what we have been trying to do to better your condition. We have certainly accomplished a good deal, and all without your solicitation. July 1, 1907, we shortened the working day by discontinuing receipting for business at 6 o'clock, closing our branch offices at 7. In June of this year we began closing branch offices at 6 o'clock. This last step was taken not only for the purpose of shortening the working day of employes at such offices, but to benefit wagonmen. Our action was severely criticised by a few merchants.
>
> This circular letter is written for the purpose of obtaining from each individual wagonman concerned a written statement of what he was in quest when he left our service to join the strikers. Those of you who are satisfied with present conditions, leaving the matter of hours of employment and salary to us, as heretofore, we would request kindly to so state in writing, but if there is anything that we can do that we have not already done which would be for the greatest good to the greatest number we will be only too glad to know what it is.

"We received several score replies," said Mr. Christie yesterday, "and most of the writers said that they were entirely satisfied with prevailing conditions and had only gone on strike because they had to do so or be driven off the wagons. A few asked for more money, and some wanted overtime."

Several express companies combined yesterday to advertise a reward of $100 for the arrest and conviction of the persons who assaulted an express company employe on Nov. 24 because he was not wearing a union button.

MIGHT - HAVE - BEENS

Are broken threads in the woof of life that prove how frail our judgment is.

Many a property owner, for instance, who dreamed of eight or even ten per cent. on his investment, has since had to face the stern reality of three or four per cent., or even less.

That is why we so persistently urge Economy, Quality and Speed as essential to a successful building operation.

Our building operations are successful from the Owner's point of view.

ASKS $30,095,698 FOR WATERWAYS

Chief of Engineers Estimate Eliminates Many Costly Pet Projects of Politicians.

DONE AT TAFT'S DIRECTION

New York Allowed Nearly $2,000,000—Oregon Almost as Much—$5,500,000 for Mississippi Above Passes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Appropriations needed for river and harbor work for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, aggregate $30,095,698, according to estimates made public to-day by Secretary of War Dickinson in the form of a report made to him by Brig. Gen. W. H. Bixby, Chief of Engineers of the United States Army. These figures will be sent to Congress by Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh, and legislation in accordance therewith will be recommended by President Taft in his annual message. The estimates are divided as follows:

Under continuing contracts	$7,368,077
Rivers and harbors, (general,) including Mississippi River Commission, and examinations, surveys, and contingencies	22,627,361
Under California Debris Commission, (expenses)	15,000
Prevention of deposits in New York Harbor	85,260

Many pet projects calling for the expenditure of large sums have been omitted from the estimates this year. Among these are the fourteen-foot channel from Chicago to the Illinois River, the deep channel for the Missouri River from St. Louis to Kansas City, and from Kansas City north, as well as many others which have had as their champions members of both houses of Congress who insisted strenuously that these projects be not forgotten.

The elimination of many of the improvements which have formed parts of River and Harbor bills in the past is in accordance with the insistence of President Taft that "pork barrel" measures shall be strangled. Instructions were given to the engineer officers of the army to prepare estimates only for such projects as are absolutely needed or which give certain promise to reduce the cost of transportation by opening up new water routes and enlarging some of those already existing.

The general estimates, aggregating more than $22,000,000, are applied to 211 works.

New York's Share.

The estimates cover the following undertakings in New York:

Improving Black Rock harbor, $400,000; harbor at Charlotte, $50,000; at Great Sodus Bay, $30,000; Hempstead harbor, $23,500; at Little Sodus Bay, $30,000; New York harbor, for maintenance improving Ambrose Channel, $100,000; harbor at Oswego, $85,000; at Rondout and Peekskill, $6,000; improving Bronx River and East Chester Creek, $10,000; removing obstructions in East River and Hell Gate, N. Y., $200,000; improving Harlem River, $75,000; improving Hudson River, $750,000; Newtown Creek, $20,000; Westchester Creek, $32,780; Arthur Kill in New York and New Jersey, $10,000.

In New Jersey the estimates allow for improving Keyport harbor, Matawan Creek, Raritan and South rivers, Shoal Harbor and Compton Creek, and Cheesequake Creek, $30,500; maintenance of Raritan River, $20,000; Alloway Creek, $5,000; Cooper Creek, $5,000, and Mantua Creek, $6,000; improving Passaic River, $5,000; Raccoon Creek, $5,000; Salem River, $10,000; Shrewsbury River, $10,000; Tuckerton Creek, $23,380, and Woodbridge Creek, $3,000.

In Pennsylvania there is allowed for maintenance and continuing improvements for a 35-foot channel in Delaware River from Allegheny Avenue, Philadelphia, to the sea, $1,200,000; for the harbor at Erie, $30,000; and the harbor at Pittsburg, $5,000.

For the Potomac River, $60,000 is allowed, and for the Anacostia River $200,000.

For deepening Mobile Harbor to a depth of twenty-seven feet $505,000 is allowed, and for Mobile bar $5,000. For improving Southwest Pass, Mississippi River, the estimate is $450,000. Galveston Harbor gets $155,000 for maintenance and $125,000 for improving channel; channel from Galveston Harbor to Texas City, $50,000; West Galveston Bay, $25,000; channel to Port Bolivar, $25,000.

For the Mississippi River, in order to continue improvements from the head of the passes to the mouth of the Ohio River, including the expenses of the Mississippi River Commission, the allowance is $3,000,000; from the mouth of the Ohio River to the Missouri River, $1,000,000; from the Missouri River to Minneapolis, $1,250,000, and for construction of lock and dam between St. Paul and Minneapolis, $250,000.

Oregon also gets a liberal share. For the harbor at Coos Bay, $40,000 is allowed; Tillamook Bay and Harbor, $5,000; Willamette and Yamhill Rivers, $20,000; Columbia and Lower Willamette Rivers, below Portland, $150,000; mouth of Columbia River, $950,000, and at Three Mile Rapids, $600,000, and the Upper Columbia and Snake Rivers above Celilo Falls, $25,000; Snake River up to Pittsburg Landing, $15,000.

In Hawaii, the harbor at Hilo gets $250,000; the harbor at Kahului, $150,000.

Estimates were made aggregating, $7,868,077 for works which Congress has provided may be carried under a continuing contract system and these are not included in the total of the new estimates submitted by Gen. Bixby. These items include the following:

Bay Ridge and Red Hook Channels, Gowanus Bay, N. Y., $241,000; for 35-foot channel at Boston, Mass., $1,100,000; Passaic River, N. J., $150,000; Arthur Kill, New York and New Jersey, $100,000; Delaware River, for 12-foot channel from Philadelphia to Trenton, $160,000; harbor at Newport, R. I., $183,000; for construction of locks and dams in the Ohio River below Pittsburg, $1,705,000.

WANTS SENATOR INDICTED.

Charges Renewed Against Warren for Fencing Federal Land.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Charges of violating the law against fencing in Government land were filed to-day before a Senate Committee against Senator Francis E. Warren of Wyoming, by Matthew E. O'Brien, representing Albert S. Connelly of Wyoming, who declared that he had vainly tried to induce the Department of Justice, and also the Department of the Interior under Mr. Ballinger, to act.

FOR NEW CUSTOMS SERVICE.

Wilkie to Raise the Efficiency of Secret Treasury Agents.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The Secret Service proper and the secret police agents of the Customs Service are to be reorganized under the supervision of Chief Wilkie. The two services will retain their separate existence, but Mr. Wilkie has been instructed to bring the customs agents up to the standard of efficiency the Secret Service is believed to have attained under his direction. This plan will involve several changes in personnel, which were announced by the Secretary of the Treasury to-day.

John E. Wilkie, Chief of the Secret Service, will become Supervisor and Chief of the Special Agents Service, exclusive of the officers in the employ of the Internal Revenue. He will also retain his position as Chief of the Secret Service.

George W. Marr, present Chief of the Special Agents Service, will take the position of Assistant Chief. This change is at his own request.

Leslie M. Cullom, now Special Agent in charge of the Baltimore Customs District, will take charge of the office of the Special Agents Service in Washington.

The effect of these changes will be that Chief Wilkie will spend a large portion of his time traveling. He will visit every Customs District in the country with a view to a thorough overhauling and reorganization. Mr. Cullom will act as executive head of the service, with Mr. Marr as Assistant Chief.

The executive portion of the office work of the Secret Service will be undertaken by Assistant Chief W. H. Moran, whose status will remain unchanged. Chief Wilkie will receive no added compensation by the change.

Mr. Marr requested to be transferred from the head of the Special Agents Service because of advanced age. He is now more than 70 years old, and has spent forty-eight years in the Government service.

The secret police system of the Customs Service extends over the United States and Europe. The Secret Service under Chief Wilkie has become a highly developed organization for the detection of counterfeiters, and also protects the life of the President.

Secretary MacVeagh's intention is to protect the Nation's customs receipts with the same vigilance as the Treasury Department does its money.

FUR PRICES UP 50 PER CENT.

Fashion's Demands Threaten to Diminish Permanently the Supply.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Dame Fashion, who decreed that many furs should be worn this season, has not only made the prices soar 50 per cent., but has caused the trappers to decimate the fur-bearing animals so that the future supply will be considerably reduced, according to Consular reports.

United States Consul General John H. Snodgrass at Moscow, Russia, writes that a Russian newspaper, in lamenting the transfer of the Siberian fur trade into the control of Americans, attributes the rising prices to their operations. Moscow traders, however, do not blame American buyers for dealing directly with the Kamchatka trappers instead of purchasing in the Siberian fur fairs, where the middleman advances prices by an amount equal to his own profit.

URGES SCHOOL HEALTH CULT

Pupils' Physical Condition Should Be Examined and Rated, Says Wiley.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Pupils in all schools should be graded in health and in their progress therein rated, in the opinion of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture.

"The time will soon be here," he said to-day, "when 'progress in health' will be rated on every school examination, along with progress in other lines. Every school will have its doctor or corps of doctors and physical directors, who will devote themselves entirely to helping the pupils to advance toward the goal of perfect manhood and womanhood."

Dr. Wiley, who returned to-day from a short trip through the West, in the course of which he visited a number of schools, declared that he was much pleased to find in one of them this health principle already in operation.

"This was at the Margaret Morrison School of Domestic Science at Pittsburg," he said. "It is the first and only school in the world, so far as I know," he added, "where 'health progress' is marked. I never saw a healthier lot of girls than the 186 there. There were no pale-faces among them.

"At West Point and at Annapolis a physical entrance examination is required," he said, "but after they are once in the cadets and middies are not graded on their advancement in physical condition."

FORGERY IN EXCISE PETITION.

Commissioner of Deeds Loses His License for Certifying a False One.

Mayor Gaynor has taken away the license of James O. Wright of 2,283 Seventh Avenue, as a Commissioner of Deeds, after a hearing on charges brought against him of certifying an excise license petition on which there were forged signatures. The petitioner was Alexander J. Abrams of 513 Lenox Avenue. The charges were brought by the Harlem Property Owners' Association through Frederick W. Stelle, counsel for the State Excise Commission.

Several witnesses testified before the Mayor that their signatures on the petition were forgeries, and one woman, whose husband's name was in the list, said that he had been dead for years.

The Mayor has turned the matter over to the District Attorney, and Mr. Stelle says he will take steps for the revocation of Abrams's license.

Injured at a Hospital, She Says.

The lawyer for Anna M. Rogers, in a suit against the Columbia University Trustees and Dr. James D. Voorhees, explained to Supreme Court Justice Seabury yesterday that his client was injured while a patient at the Sloane Maternity Hospital by the failure to remove a glass vessel which splintered in her body. The action was brought against the college as owning the hospital and against Dr. Voorhees as the physician in charge. Argument arose on a motion to compell the plaintiff to state the causes of action separately.

OPPOSE PUSH-CART MARKET.

Harlem Residents Go to Court to Oust Peddlers from Park Avenue.

Property-owners, residents, and merchants in the neighborhood, who have been fighting to abolish the pushcart peddlers' market in Park Avenue, between 110th and 118th Streets, since it was created four years ago, have applied for a writ of mandamus to compel the city to do away with the market, and the papers have been served upon Mayor Gaynor, Police Commissioner Cropsey, and Borough President McAneny. The motion will be heard by Supreme Court Justice Seabury on Friday.

The petition alleges that the market is a nuisance and that it exists contrary to law. The petition says:

> Your petitioners complain of the obstruction on the street, upon the ground that they as taxpayers are entitled to the free use of the public highways of the City of New York, and upon a further ground that through the unlawful consent and neglect of the respondents there has been established an unlawful market, being used by persons a great many of whom are not even citizens of the United States and have no license to vend and pay no rental for the ground for the said unlawful use of the streets.
>
> Although complaints have at various times been made by your petitioners and various committees of citizens and property owners to the Police Commissioner and the President of the Borough of Manhattan, the respondent officials have neglected to carry out and enforce the statutes and ordinances of the City and State of New York.

So great is the opposition to the market that the Park Avenue Anti-Pushcart Association has been formed.

EXPECT NEW SUBWAY OFFER TO-MORROW

Probably Will Be Made After the Interborough Directors Hold Their Meeting.

ADD CASH TO CITY CREDIT

Brooklyn Merchants Call on McAdoo and Urge Him to Bid for the Operation of the Fourth Ave. Tunnel.

The Directors of the Interborough held a long conference yesterday with President Shonts, who has just returned from Chicago. After the regular meeting of the board on Wednesday it is expected that the Interborough's new offer on subway extensions will go to the Public Service Commission.

This offer, as THE TIMES said last week, generally is understood to include a subway up Lexington Avenue and one down Seventh Avenue from Forty-second Street, conditioned upon the city's putting its present borrowing capacity in the undertaking, the Interborough adding capital, to build the extensions.

The Interborough's plans for a new elevated extension in the Bronx and a subway in Brooklyn, with a tunnel from Liberty Street to Pineapple Street, Brooklyn, and an extension out Nostrand Avenue to Eastern Parkway, were incorporated in the letter from President Shonts to the Public Service Commission last July. It since then has been considered a substantial part of the Interborough's programme.

Vice President Frank Hedley and several Interborough engineering officials spent a good part of yesterday in the commission's offices, working on the details of the elevated extensions in the Bronx and the third tracking of the Second, Third, and Ninth Avenue elevated lines, under the agreement reached several weeks ago with the Public Service Commission. This agreement also covers the operation of the Steinway tunnel.

That portion of the agreement covering the Steinway tunnel already has been laid before the Board of Estimate in a proposition by the Public Service Commission to lay out a new rapid transit route from the Grand Central under the East River to Long Island City. The proposal was referred to the Transit Committee of the commission pending the receipt of more definite information about the plan to open the tunnel.

A committee representing the Allied Civic Bodies of South Brooklyn called on William G. McAdoo yesterday and laid before him facts showing the traffic possibilities of the Fourth Avenue subway. An offer by Mr. McAdoo to operate this subway is expected to be submitted to the Public Service Commission to-day or to-morrow, as supplementing that already made to operate the triborough route with certain modifications.

The committee told Mr. McAdoo they were enthusiastically in favor of the triborough line as a whole, even though their immediate interest was in the Fourth Avenue line. Mr. McAdoo said the big fight, as he considered it, would come in getting contracts covering the triborough route as a whole adopted by the Board of Estimate. In connection with his offer already made he said he confidently expected to operate the entire triborough eventually, but held that the trunk-line section only would reach its fullest service when the extensions were built.

Wilbur Fisk of Harvey Fisk & Co., the McAdoo bankers, and J. V. Davies, Chief Engineer of the McAdoo companies, will make a trip over the Fourth Avenue route to Fort Hamilton and Coney Island to-day, escorted by the committee of the Allied Civic Bodies.

ESTAB OVER HALF A CENTURY

Choice of a Winter Overcoat deserves deliberate thought

You do not buy an Overcoat as you would a cigar, merely by dropping into the first convenient shop. Your Overcoat is to be a close companion for many months. Choose it with care.

Warmth it must give. That is an essential that goes without saying. Service you have a right to expect. No garment is worthy of consideration unless it wears well.

But distinction, elegance and finish—these are matters that depend absolutely upon where your choice is made.

Saks Overcoats present the ultimate achievement of trained tailormen; the beauty of modelling that skilled designers only can attain; the near approach to perfection in craftsmanship and finish that only a highly developed staff such as ours can bestow.

Slip on one or a dozen of our Overcoats. Note its effect; if it does not suit you, there are other dozens from which to choose. But you will know before buying just what you will get—and you will not run the slightest risk of dissatisfaction.

THREE OF A KIND AT THE COMEDY THEATRE

With William Collier, Sr., Chief Fun-maker in Edgar Selwyn's New Farce.

MUCH LAUGHTER ENSUES

A Typical Collier Piece in Which He Is Assisted by William, Jr., and Others of the Family.

I'LL BE HANGED IF I DO. A farce, in three acts, by Edgar Selwyn and William Collier. William Collier's Comedy Theatre.

Hi Low	Stanley Murphy
Hiram Kelly	Fred Esmelton
Frank Sinclair	Willard R. Feeley
Percival Kelly	William Collier
Mrs. Sinclair	Clara Reynolds Smith
Celia Sinclair	Maude Gilbert
Samson	James B. Sheeran
Murphy	M. L. Heckert
Slattery	Stephen Haley
Gabby	Albert West
Mar'm Sanderson	Helena Collier Garrick
Peaceful	John B. Adam
Binks	William Collier, Jr.
Happy Stokes	Richard Malchien
Bonny	Paula Marr
Bob Carter	Thomas Beauregard
Bill Sanderson	Thomas Findlay
Handsome	Sallie Tompkins
Bartender	Thomas Stuart

There were three of a kind at the Comedy—beg pardon, William Collier's Comedy—Theatre last night.

To begin with, there was William himself. Also William's sister, Helena Collier Garrick. Finally, Mr. William Collier, Jr. Tucked away in the programme, too, and out of sight of the audience there was another Collier, business manager of the attraction, but history does not record whether he was of the same brand, and he does not count. Anyhow, who expects a business manager to be funny? Of both William Collier and his sister it was expected. They always are funny. Of William Collier, Jr., nothing was known. But the bright-eyed youngster, with the fascinating lisp and cherubic face—fancy a Collier being cherubic—made his points like a veteran. And he was funny, also. Finally, there was a play—so-called—fashioned by Edgar Selwyn to allow all the Colliers, and especially William, Sr., (thus has "Willie" grown,) to do those amusing things which are practically certain to start an audience roaring and keep it in that state.

In the present play, which bears the highly illuminative title "I'll Be Hanged If I Do," Mr. Collier is—as he has been frequently—a young man regarded by a competent parent as a hopeless incompetent. He begins by forgetting—or seeming to forget—his wedding day, the first act resolving itself into a series of excruciatingly funny scenes, in which his father, the bride's brother and mother, and finally the bride herself, call at his apartments to find out why he has neglected to appear at the church in time for the wedding. A morning tub, an appearance in pajamas, a subsequent entrance in smart attire for the wedding, with a final plea for a belated breakfast before going to be married, serve to create more delay, many laughs, and ultimately the withdrawal of the bride, whose mother is persuaded to forbid the match, though it has been a pet project of her late husband's and the father of the dilatory young man. The result is that Percival—that is the young man's name—with a check for $10,000, is sent to Nevada to grow up. Incidentally, the first surprise—a visit of the prospective bride to thank Percival for his help in preventing a marriage which would have been distasteful to them both. And now in high good humor both of them sit down to breakfast.

By all the rules of the game they ought to fall in love with each other then and there. But they don't. Percival goes West, and the girl disappears from the play. It is just as well. There is plenty to keep him busy for another act. Also, there is another girl. Percival has bought "the best revolver they had at Tiffanys." And he draws it when he is accused of robbing the stage express and is in danger of swift justice at the end of a rope. He gets away from one noose, and to take no further chances collects all the rope in the immediate neighborhood, as well as the twine.

Then there is a trial scene, one of the most absurdly funny that can be imagined, with a jury including the German barmaid, who doesn't understand a word of English, and a foreman and Judge both of whom are already positive that Percival is guilty. He stands a fine chance. But he insists on acting as his own lawyer for defense.

Needless to say this situation provides Mr. Collier with innumerable opportunities for his slow, dry, pointed, and telling method with lines. And the laughter is almost incessant.

There is less of it in the final act, which is mercifully short. In it he returns home fabulously rich and successful, pays his father in his own coin, and gets the girl he wants.

It is a typical Collier play, in fact, which is mostly all Collier and funny lines for Collier to deliver, as only he can deliver them. Which is not to say that occasionally an opportunity does not come to others, his sister, for instance, who does conventional things in an unconventional way, and the youngster, who is bright and flippant and happy, as a thoroughly up-to-date young bandit, who has been saving up to go East (to Cleveland) for a long time. Percival gives him $5. Then, after much calculation, he decides he has nearly six.

Percival bribes him to relate deeds of daring accomplished by him (Percival) to impress his sister. And in his efforts to make good overdoes it so that the sister, of course, is not deceived. More anxious moments for Percival—that is to say, William, Sr., who is never so funny as when he is anxious. He is, indeed, essentially a comedian who scores best by having others seemingly score on him. That is one of his strong cards. It reverses exactly the means by which Helena Collier Garrick usually makes her points.

The how and the why, however, matter little to most people. They go to laugh at Collier. And so certain is his method that even the old-timer would risk his neck if he sat back and said "I'll be hanged if I do."

Of the other clever people in the company, Stephen Maley, Thomas Findley, Paula Marr, Stanley Murphy, Frederick Esmelton, Maude Gilbert, and Clare Reynolds Smith may be especially commended. But the cast in its entirety is entirely equal to all demands..

SEVERE ON "CLEMENTINE."

London Critics Severe on Play, but Hattie Williams Wins Success.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 28. — "Decorating Clementine" was presented to-night by Charles Frohman at the Globe Theatre with the company he transported from New York for the London production. G. P. Huntley received a warm welcome on his reappearance, but his subsequent performance scarcely fulfilled the expectations aroused by reports of his New York success in the rôle.

Among the American members of the cast Hattie Williams scored a distinctive success, and Louis Massen's study of the Director of Fine Arts also received a tribute of praise.

To those who had seen "Le Bois Sacre" in Paris, the adaptation was a disappointment, but in spite of many flaws and inequalities of treatment "Decorating Clementine" was pronounced very good in spots and on the whole had a pleasant, if not enthusiastic, first night reception.

The English critics are severe on the play. One describes it as a well-meant mistake.

Seats for the Mark Twain Memorial.

The committee in charge of the Mark Twain memorial service has distributed all the seats in Carnegie Hall for Wednesday evening, Nov. 30. After that time vacant seats, except in boxes, may be occupied by those not having tickets.

"HENRY OF NAVARRE" OLD-FASHIONED PLAY

Fred Terry and Julia Neilson in a Romantic Drama with Theatric Tricks of Years.

BUT AUDIENCE ENJOYS IT

Applaud Henry's Ready Success at Foiling the Machinations of His Enemies at Court of King Charles IX.

Marie Belleforet	Eileen Beatrice
Charlotte de Sauve	Gladys Gardner
La Belle Dayole	Doris Marshall
Mlle. de Montmorenci	Dora Jesslyn
Mlle. de Torigni	Beatrice Manning
Marguerite de Valois	Julia Neilson

Fred Terry and Julia Neilson appeared last night in the four-act romantic drama "Henry of Navarre." It is replete with the theatric devices of thirty years, but it has stirring situations and it pleased the audience.

Henry's efforts in overcoming the machinations of his many enemies at the Court of Charles IX. furnished the basis of the primitive drama.

Fred Terry's performance of the title rôle was filled with boyish enthusiasm, a sense of dramatic values and a thorough understanding of the rôle. Miss Neilson's acting as the Queen aroused much applause. The audience also liked the acting of Malcolm Cherry as King Charles, Philip Merivale as the Duc de Guise, and Humberstone Wright as the Duc de Anjou. Phyllis Manners played the rôle of Catherine de Medici and Eileen Beatrice had the part of Marguerite's confidante, Marie Belleforet. Walter Edwin, as a Huguenot friend of Henry, is also deserving of mention.

MRS. SAGE GIVES $150,000

To Build a Vassar Dormitory, Named After Her Grandmother.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 28.—President James M. Taylor of Vassar College announced before the chapel exercises to-night that Mrs. Russell Sage had presented Vassar with $150,000 for the construction of a new residence hall or dormitory. The gift was made two weeks ago, but it was not until to-day that President Taylor received Mrs. Sage's permission to make it public.

The new building is very much needed, as a great many students are living off the campus. The new hall will be called "The Olivia Jasselyn Hall," after the mother of Mrs. Sage's father, daughter of Olivia Standish, a direct descendant of Miles Standish.

New Circus Acts at Hippodrome.

Several new circus acts were put on at the Hippodrome yesterday, with the bears and the elephants of the old bill retained. Among the newcomers were Branda and Derrick, equestrians, who were seen here last season; the Curzon Sisters, who do an aerial dance while hanging by their teeth; the Joe de Cos company of equilibrists; the Patty Brothers, head balancers; Victoria Codona, a slack-wire performer; the Four Nightons, in classic poses, and Sim Nederwald and his trained monkey.

NOVELTIES IN VAUDEVILLE.

Yvette, a Little Singing and Dancing Violinist, a Hit at the Victoria.

Strong competition having suddenly sprung up among the important vaudeville theatres in the last week or two, the bills at the various houses yesterday offered more than the usual number of novelties. The act that made one of the biggest hits of the afternoon came practically unheralded to the Victoria Theatre. This was Yvette, a slender little red-haired violinist. Another novelty at the Victoria was the appearance of the "Silhouette Girl," who gave a series of posture dances in company with a male companion, all in silhouette. Marie Empress, a heavily advertised English performer, also made her first appearance at the Victoria.

At the American Music Hall the principal features were Charles Bigelow and Mizzi Hajos in a musical sketch; Haroldi, a Polish violinist, and Ross and Fenton, returning to vaudevile for a short time. The Bigelow-Hajos sketch was written by Roi Cooper Magrue, and gave the grotesque comedian and the Viennese singer good opportunities to show their skill. Haroldi, looking as much like Paderewski as to be his double, proved a skillful violinist and pleased well. Ross and Fenton appeared in one of their specialties and were welcomed. There were some twenty other acts on the bill.

At the Colonial Theatre Clarice Mayne, an English music hall singer, made her reappearance after two years' absence. She was accompanied on the piano by James W. Tate, and she sang several new songs that the audience seemed to enjoy. Among them were "Put on Your 'Ta-Ta,' Little Girlie," (a "ta-ta" is a hat;) "By the Moon's Pale Light," and "Nursie Nurses Her Little Percy." In respense to several encores she sang, "I'm Longing for Some One to Love Me." The Lorch family of acrobats was another number new to New York. The rest of the programme contained several popular vaudeville features.

Gertrude Hoffmann, in an elaboration of her "Revue" of last season, was the principal feature at Keith & Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre. Miss Hoffmann has a large supporting company, including many of the pretty girls of last year, and a group of East Indians, who appear in her impersonation of Ruth St. Denis. She has added several impersonations to her repertoire. Other numbers on the programme included World and Kingston, Albert Hole, Claude and Fannie Usher, and the Belleclaire brothers.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

The first performance of "The Foolish Virgin," in which Mrs. Patrick Campbell will play the principal role, will be given at the Knickerbocker Theatre on Dec. 19.

"Madame Troubadour" was removed from the Lyric to Nazimova's Thirty-ninth Street Theatre last night to continue its run. Mme. Marietta Olly is playing the leading role.

Col. Henry Watterson will attend the performance of "The Cub" at the Circle Theatre to-night to see Douglas Fairbanks portray one of the reporters from The Louisville Courier-Journal.

While "Mary Magdeline" with Olgo Nethersole is playing at The New Theatre the repertoire company will go on a ten days' tour, visiting five cities. It will appear at Rochester Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday; Schenectady Thursday, and Albany Friday and Saturday. Springfield and New Haven will be played the following week. The plays will be "Don," "Sister Beatrice," and "The Thunderbolt."

VAUDEVILLE AT MANHATTAN.

Attractive Acts Fill the Big Theatre on Opening Day.

Vaudeville replaced opera at the Manhattan Opera House yesterday, and the first day's audience filled the auditorium to its capacity. Maggie Cline was the principal number on the bill, and received an ovation for her Irish songs. Odiva, in a swimming and diving act, caused much applause, and Billy B. Van and the Beaumont sisters presented their well-known sketch. Other numbers on the long programme were Stuart Barnes, "Motoring," Gene Green, James and Sadie Leonard, Luciana Lucca, the Two Rucks, the Seebacks, Farrell-Taylor Trio, Dunlap's educated horse, the Konerz brothers, Saona, the five Juggling Jewels, Manning and Ford, Lightning Hopper, the great Artusa, Frank and Edith Raymond, and the La Dent Trio.

A novelty introduced by William Hammerstein, was the appearance of several "mute" acts, such as acrobats and trained animals, on the stage at the same time. It gave the stage the effect of a three-ring circus, but it reduced the playing time of the long programme to the average length of a vaudeville performance.

Two Actresses Out of Bankruptcy.

Judge Hough yesterday granted a discharge in bankruptcy to Marie Dressler, actress, of 7 East Eighty-seventh Street, otherwise known as Mrs. Leila Koerber, who filed a petition on Sept. 3, 1909, with liabilities of $26,000 and no assets. She went through bankruptcy once before, on June 13, 1901.

Judge Hough also granted a discharge from bankruptcy to Truly Shattuck, actress, of 810 West Fifty-eighth Street, otherwise known as Clarice Etrulia de Bucharde Douglas, who filed a petition on Sept. 1 last, with liabilities of $2,708 and no assets.

MR. PACH BEGS WIFE TO RETURN TO HIM

Answering Her Suit for Divorce in Open Court, He Promises Never to Allude to the Past.

STUNNED AT HER CHARGES

Never a Cloud on Their Married Life, He Says, Until Some Sinister Influence Intervened in a Day.

Vice Chancellor Stevenson in Jersey City yesterday ordered Alexander L. Pach, of Pach Brothers, photographers of 935 Broadway, this city, to pay his wife, Joanna S. Pach, $25 a week alimony pending her suit for a limited divorce on the ground of cruelty. The Pachs have a fine home at 512 Cumberland Avenue, Westfield, N. J. They were married Sept. 1, 1888, and have six children, the eldest being 21 years old, and the youngest 3 years.

Mrs. Pach is a daughter of John M. Stewart of Newark, and sister of Charles H. Stewart of 51 Bruen Avenue, Irvington, N. J., a lawyer, who represents her in her action. She charges that her husband has always been the victim of an ungovernable temper, that he has repeatedly struck and kicked her, that he has called her names, and that he has thrown food from the table in her face.

Mr. Pach says, in answer to his wife's charges, that he has been totally deaf since childhood, and that his communications with his family have been carried on partly by speaking, partly by writing, and partly by sign language. "I cannot recall a single incidence," says he, "during the course of our marital life, until the evident object of these proceedings was inculcated in my wife's mind, when a cloud has arisen to obscure the serenity of our matrimonial horizon. I have always taken pride in the pursuit of a course of conduct toward my wife and children calculated to endear rather than estrange, and I am at a loss to comprehend the reason for the present attitude of my wife and children toward me, unless it be that some sinister influences are at work for the purpose of wrecking our home, separating my wife and family from me, and through the machinations of the vicious and evilly disposed her mind has become poisoned with newly conceived aversion which is being further incited by persons militant to me."

Mr. Pach's story of his marital troubles goes back only to Nov. 4 of this year, when he and his wife had dinner together in New York and went to the theatre. On the morning of Nov. 5, as he was starting for business in New York, he noticed that part of his wearing apparel needed mending, and he aroused Mrs. Pach from her sleep and asked her to mend it. He says she dressed, went downstairs, came back in a few minutes with her two eldest children, who shook their fists at him in a threatening manner. He says he couldn't hear what they said, and when he asked them to say it in sign language they left the room.

Two nights later he found two notes pinned to the electric lamp in the back room. One was from his wife to her two eldest sons, saying she was going to New York. The other was from the two sons, explaining that they had seen their mother go.

On Nov. 13 one of the boys reported that his Uncle Charles said he had sent Mrs. Pach away, and that he would not tell her husband where. When Mr. Pach came home the next night his whole family had disappeared. He says he went to the home of his brother-in-law in Irvington, and was refused admittance, and that when he went to the home of his wife's father he was told he would be arrested if he did not leave the premises. On Nov. 18 he was served with the papers in the divorce suit.

"Upon reading the same," he says, "for the first time the intelligence was conveyed to me that my wife was unhappy in her marital life, and it appears to me incredible that after all the years of happiness that she and I have shared she would voluntarily make such false charges against me or cast such unjust imputations upon me as those contained in her petition."

Mr. Pach says that on the advice of Dr. Mark H. Williams of 556 West 150th Street he wrote the following letter to his daughter:

> Alma, my darling daughter, go to mamma on your bended knees and tell her to come back, and I will do everything to make her happy. I will take your room and you can room with her. I will not even speak to her unless she speaks to me. I will eat everything she places before me gladly and uncomplainingly. I will make her happy and be as a servant in the house. Alma, darling, do this so we may have our happy home again.
>
> YOUR HEARTBROKEN FATHER.

Mr. Pach sent a letter to his son Vincent on Sunday, Nov. 20, which read:

> Here is your insurance bill. Pay it. I am crushed, stunned, paralyzed with horror by the charges your mother makes. She never turned against me this way. Poor Junior, poor Howard, poor Alma, poor Jack, and you big boys. I would sleep in the cellar to keep the roof over your heads. I love you, and I love her, with a devotion not exceeded by any other father on earth.

Mr. Pach denies specifically all the acts of cruelty alleged by his wife. In conclusion he says: "It was my sincere desire that she and my children return. Here in open court I protest the wrong and injustice done me by the false charges preferred against me. I hereby promise in the event that my wife becomes reconciled to me that I will refrain from any allusion to the past."

SEARCH ABROAD FOR LEWIS.

Police Think the Trunk Murder Suspect May Be with a Brother.

The police were able to state positively for the first time yesterday that the body of the man found in the zinc-encased trunk at 450 West Fifty-fourth Street was that of Albert C. Callier, the missing artist. Until then both Deputy Police Commissioner Flynn and Inspector Russell wanted it understood that they had never said that the trunk victim was Callier.

Within the last forty-eight hours, however, there have been important developments in the case, and evidence showing that the trunk victim was undoubtedly Callier has come into possession of the police.

The police have been in communication with relatives of Callier in Paris, and have also succeeded in tracing his movements from the various boarding houses in which he lived up to the time of his disappearance in June, 1902. They put little credence in the statements of persons who maintain they have seen the artist as late as the year 1905. It was learned yesterday that some time in 1902 Callier's relatives reported him missing to the police, and that a search was then made for him here.

"It is true that there have lately been important developments in the case," said Deputy Commissioner Flynn, "but what they are I am not ready to state. I will say, however, that we have evidence in our possession which conclusively establishes the fact that the trunk victim was Callier."

Paul H. Merkens and his wife of 13 Broadway, Elmhurst, Queens, who were among Callier's intimate friends here, agree with the police that the trunk victim was their artist friend, and are certain that the persons who say they have seen the missing artist later than 1902 are mistaken. Ten years ago Merkens had a grocery store in Lenox Avenue, in the neighborhood where Callier then made his home.

"Just before the time when Callier is supposed to have been murdered he visited us in Harlem and told us about his visit to France a short time previously," said Merkens yesterday. "He promised to call on us in a few days, but we never saw him again. We thought at the time that he must have returned to Normandy suddenly, because he mentioned to us that his presence might be necessary at home to settle the family finances. If he had ever come back to New York he most certainly would have looked us up. Lewis was with Callier the last time he came to see us."

Charles Noll of 308 Lenox Avenue said the last time he saw Callier was after the artist had left Harlem.

"I ran into Callier," he said, "in 1902, downtown somewhere. He told me he had obtained a place as butler in the home of a wealthy man. That was the last time I ever saw him. He said on leaving he would drop around and see his old friends some day, but he never did."

The police are prosecuting a diligent search for Lewis. He has a brother who served in the Boer war and lives in London. He has another brother who is said to be living in South Africa. The police are trying to ascertain if he is with either of these two brothers.

A man named W. G. Clark, who refused to give his address, reported to the police yesterday that he recognized in the published pictures of Lewis the likeness of a man he had a conversation with in the corridor of the Hotel Marlborough last Spring. The man told him he was in a hurry to get away from New York. There was a report that Lewis had married a young woman twelve years ago from whom he shortly obtained a divorce. Deputy Commissioner Flynn said he had no knowledge of it.

The police are well satisfied that Lewis was not suffering with tuberculosis. They believe him to be still alive.

NO SEPARATION FOR MRS. RAY

Husband's Friends Cheer Until Justice Goff Clears the Room.

Many neighbors of James Ray, whose wife sued him for a separation, were so delighted yesterday afternoon when Justice Goff dismissed the action that they stamped their feet and applauded lustily in violation of Supreme Court etiquette and to the deep annoyance of the court, who ordered the room cleared as soon as he could make himself heard above the din.

Caroline B. Ray declared that her husband beat her. She asked for alimony and the custody of their little son. Ray said he never beat her, and complained that it had been her wont to stay out sometimes as late as 2 in the morning.

He assured the court that he would treat her kindly if she would return to him. This she vowed she would not and could not do, whereat Justice Goff decided she had not only failed in her duty as a wife, but failed to establish a case.

SEEKS DEATH WITH HER BABY

Mrs. Acker and Little One in Her Arms Found Unconscious from Gas.

Clasping her three-year-old baby in her arms, Mrs. Anna Acker was found yesterday unconscious from gas at 472 Brook Avenue, the Bronx. The woman, who had attempted suicide, was taken to the Lincoln Hospital in a serious condition. The baby was left at the home of a friend.

Mrs. Acker sent her children, Joseph, 13 years old; Julia, 11, and Lucy, 9, to school. Tillie, the baby, remained at home. At the noon hour the three children returned and found their room locked. Mrs. Margaret Abbarts, a neighbor, forced the door and found Mrs. Acker unconscious, with gas flowing from two burners.

Dr. Dunlap quickly revived the baby, but the mother was taken to the hospital a prisoner. No note was found and the police were unable to learn the reasons why she tried to end her life.

SING SING FUGITIVE CAUGHT.

Shepiro, In for Burglary, Had Been Free Since Oct. 5.

Otto Shepiro, who escaped from Sing Sing Prison on Oct. 5, was arrested late yesterday afternoon and locked up at Police Headquarters. At first he denied his identity, but when his picture was shown to him he admitted he was the man wanted.

On Jan. 30, 1909, Shepiro, who then lived at 146 East Twenty-seventh Street, was convicted of burglary in the third degree and sentenced to Sing Sing for one year and six months.

Several months ago the prisoner was assigned to do work on Deer Island, where a new building of the prison is being erected. From there he escaped. Detective Benner got trace of him and arrested him at Avenue A and Second Street.

State Detective Jackson will arrive here to-day from Sing Sing to take Shepiro back to prison.

In the Presence of
THE SOLO APOLLO
All Other Pianos Become Archaic

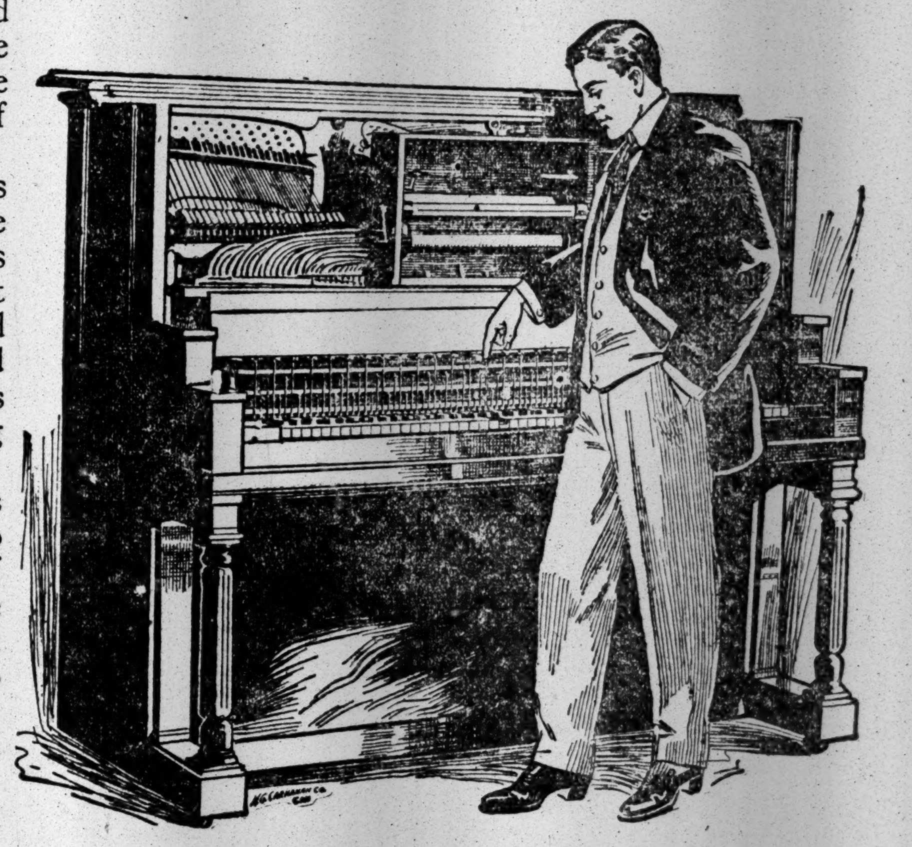
This is not advertising enthusiasm. It is a FACT, easy of demonstration, and which it is of the utmost importance to every piano purchaser to have demonstrated.

THIS IS WHY:

Imagine that one artist, with a soft, precise touch, gives all his attention to playing the accompaniment; and another artist, of supreme ability, devotes all his soul and skill to the rendition of the melody, accentuating every note full, rich and strong above the accompaniment.

THAT is exactly what the Solo Apollo does, and it is the only instrument mechanically constructed to positively accentuate every melody note that appears in any composition, on any part of the keyboard. This is because the Solo Apollo has two entirely separate sets of pneumatics, one of which strikes only the melody notes, and the other strikes only the notes of the accompaniment. Thus the air pressure of the pneumatics is regulated to definitely and positively accentuate all of the notes of the melody.

In addition to the double pneumatics, the Solo Apollo controls the only system which gives the direct downward stroke in striking the keys. It strikes just as the fingers of the pianist would strike and thus takes advantage of the balance of the keys, which is the development of a century of perfection by piano makers.



The buying of a piano is such a large investment, and the enjoyment of it for a lifetime is of such great importance, that no prospective purchaser should neglect to carefully examine and compare the various instruments of the first class before making a decision.

There are enough arguments for the superiority of the Solo Apollo to fill an entire page of this paper, but they would be tiring to read. We only ask that you come to the Gimbel Piano Store and allow us to demonstrate the Solo Apollo for you before making your decision.

JEROME KEOGH LEADS AT POOL

Champion of the World Defeats Deoro in Opening Session at Doyle's.

Jerome Keogh, the pool champion, led Alfredo De Oro, former title holder, in the first block of their 600-point match at Doyle's last night, the string at the finish showing Keogh 210, De Oro 180.

There was a record-breaking attendance, and the games required four hours and thirty-five minutes to complete. De Oro made the high run, 25, while Keokh tallied 22 as his best run. De Oro made 10 scratches and Keogh 7.

Keogh went about his work in methodical fashion, deliberating over most of his palys in a manner which proved tantalizing to the former champion. On the other hand the Cuban exhibited all the dash and quick action for which he is famous. That his pool has suffered through his desire to uphold the three-cushion honors was apparent, and admitted by himself.

Each showed himself possessed of the ability to execute the very essence of safety play, this feature standing Keogh in particularly good part. De Oro had the worst of any bad leaves, being sewed up many times after daring shots at opening up the game.

De Oro set the spheres in motion. Careful play by each was soon manifest. In a vain desire to hold his opponent safe, the Cuban deliberately scratched. Varied play of an ordinary kind marked the progress of the first frame with the score at the end showing 7 all. After two safety plays by each in the second frame De Oro played a side combination, which netted him the lay out of fifteen.

Ater a series of tries in the third frame, Keogh duplicated the Cuban's run of the previous session, and brought the tally up to 22 all, with a bevy of 15.

The fourth frame was all Keogh's, as after each had been left safe twice, he was enabled to run 14 balls, slipping up on the last, which debiting with a scratch, made purposely before the run, brought the string up 35 for Keogh and 23 for De Oro.

With the fifth frame well on the way each played in canny fashion, essaying safety repeatedly. The end of the frame showed a fair division of the spoils, as, less scratches, Keogh got 6, with a total of 41, and De Oro 6, with 29 as his portion. Keogh burst in the sixth frame, leaving De Oro a difficult shot on the five-ball for the corner, from which break he ran 6. After four balls he had a bad layout, but picked out a beauty for the side. Keogh made a nice cut shot the length of the rail and wound up the frame with the string showing 49 to 36 in his favor.

De Oro scratched on the break, but despite this managed to get the lion's share in the next frame, bringing the tally up to 54 to 45 against himself.

The Cuban broke in the eighth frame, and Keogh burst into the bunch in what proved a vain endeavor to corral the "3" ball. His attempt spread the balls all over the table, and De Oro gathered them all, incidentally getting into the lead for the first time, the string showing De Oro 60, Keogh 54.

The former champion came right back in the next frame with a bevy of 12, gained after his opponent had increased his score by 3, which was preceded by a scratch by the Cuban, thus leaving the tally 71 to 57 against Keogh. The latter had his innings, however, in the next frame, totaling 14 balls after De Oro had missed a combination shot by a too forceful play. Keogh followed up this brace with 15 in the next frame, the eleventh, and caused the string to show Keogh 86, De Oro 72.

Keogh continued to hold his forward position, showing particularly well in the thirteenth and fourteenth frames. At this stage the tally showed 113 to 89 in his favor.

De Oro loomed up in the sixteenth, after Keogh had made a perfect break, and ran off 13, with a total of 110 to 121. The champion sent his stock soaring in the next two frames, as he gathered in the full complement in both, while De Oro scratched in the meanwhile and lessened his total to 109, Keogh having 151.

After his opponent broke the pyramid De Oro smashed into a four-ball combination, pulling it off, but leaving himself hard. He made a beautiful cut shot, but fell down on a similar one in his next try. The frame ended 8 to 7 in Keogh's favor, with the string showing 159, to 116 for De Oro.

The Cuban swept the table in the twentieth frame, playing brilliantly, bringing his total up to 131, with his opponent standing at 159. From a series of safety plays by each, he ran off a bunch of seven before slipping up on an easy straight shot.

With the score 166 to 138 in Keogh's favor, eD Oro smashed into a four-ball combination which he pocketed. From this daring play he went along in his old-time style and dash, corraling 13, slipping up on one which he was too careless about. The string at this period showed Keogh 168, De Oro 151.

The former gathered the 15 in the next frame, taking three cracks, however, in the tries. During the next frame Keogh brought the spectators to their feet with the hardest combination of the night—a cut through the bunch to another ball on the outside, which was almost kissed out, hanging for a full second before dropping in. On top of this he slipped up, stopping with three as his portion. De Oro ran his total up to 161, with Keogh showing 185 at this stage.

In two sessions at the table during the next frame De Oro cleaned up the table, while Keogh lessened his score by one because of a scratch, bringing the string to 184 to 176.

Keogh responded with 15 in the next, running his total up to 199, or within one of his required total. The rules called for the playing out of the next frame at the end of which the string showed Keogh 210, De Oro 180, the former tallying his 200 while the Cuban was at 180.

Results of Billiard Games.

Two games were played yesterday in the continuation of the amateur three-cushion carrom billiard tournament at McGraw's Billiard Academy, Thirty-fifth Street and Sixth Avenue. In the afternoon game G. W. Smith defeated Harry Sparrow, the bantamweight billiard player, in a closely contested game, by the score of 40 to 37. Sparrow led Smith by as many as 12 points up to the thirty-fifth inning, but in this period Smith caught up to his opponent and played safely throughout the latter part of the game. Smith made a high run of 2, and Sparrow's best efforts netted him a high run of 7. The game required 168 innings. This is the longest contest of the tournament. In the evening game Dr. J. H. Birs defeated Frank Becker by the score of 40 to 32 in 100 innings. Both players made a high run of 4. To-night Frank Durbin and Harry Sparrow will cross cues.

In last night's game of the Harlem Class A amateur 18.2 balkline billiard tournament, now in progress at the Morningside Billiard Academy, 125th Street, and Lenox Avenue, Mr. Tobias defeated H. Hoffman by the score of 200 to 143 in forty-five innings. This evening Mr. Clark will meet Mr. Isaacs.

George Slosson, who is practicing for his championship match with Willie Hoppe for the 18.1 balk line billiard title, defeated Calvin Demarest in a game of 18.1 balk-line billiards last night by the score of 500 to 493. Slosson made high runs of 52 and 50, and an average of 12 32-39. Demarest's best efforts netted him high runs of 38 and 48, and an average of 12 25-39. The game was played at Slosson's Academy.

Thomas Burns of New York defeated James Ryan of New York in last night's game of the pool tournament to decide the championship of the State of New York, at the Union Billiard Academy, Forty-fifth Street and Broadway, by the score of 150 to 143, in sixty-five innings. Burns's high run was 22, and Ryan's was 20.

Mrs. King Leads Miss Clearwater.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Nov. 28.—The first day's play in continuous pool of 750 points between Mrs. Bertha May King, the world's woman champion, and Martha Clearwater, the sixteen-year-old girl player, of Pittsburg, resulted in a total of 125 for Mrs. King to 82 for the girl. Little Miss Clearwater, who is the daughter of W. H. Clearwater, thrice champion pool player of the world, looked very small by the table, and she was plainly embarrassed through both the afternoon and the evening games by the applause of her friends. It was the first time she has appeared in public in Pittsburg, and she showed much of the same peculiar style of play which brought fame to her father. Her "safe" shots brought forth much applause. Mrs. King played with confidence and assumed a lead early in the afternoon which the little girl in short dresses could not overcome. The evening game was but 50 points. The highest run was 14, made in the evening by Mrs. King.

SHRUBB-WOOD FAVORITES.

Englishmen Picked to Win International Marathon Race To-night.

The international Marathon team race over the full distance, 26 miles 385 yards, is to take place to-night at Madison Square Garden. Five teams are entered, representing half a dozen different nationalities. They will line up as follows: Holmer and Queal, America; Shrubb and Wood, England; Meadows and Woods, Canada; St. Yves and Svanberg, France and Sweden; Kohlemainen and Nieminen, Finland.

The race will be run on a track ten laps to the mile, which will necessitate the runners circling the course 262 times and an odd thirty-three yards. For this reason the start will be thirty-three yards back of the finish line, which is on the Twenty-seventh Street side of the Garden. Relay stations will be placed on the back stretch on the Twenty-sixth Street side five yards apart, and the members of the different teams will only be allowed to change partners at these marks. Judging from the time in which the twenty-mile team race held early this month in the Garden was run, (1:29:28 2-5,) the full distance record of 2:00:00 made in Philadelphia by Kohlemainen and Nieminen will be broken.

Ex-Sheriff Tom Foley has consented to fire the gun that will send the runners away, and Tim Hurst, the famous baseball umpire, will referee. The judges will be Hon. John J. Murphy, ex-Fire Commissioner Francis J. Lantry, and Dr. George H. Muth. The race will be timed by members of the New York Timers' Club, of which Capt. Charles J. Dieges is President.

While Holmer and Queal have a big following, owing to the impressive manner in which they won the twenty-mile race, the betting sharps have installed the Shrubb-Wood team favorites. Meadows and Woods arrived in town yesterday, and the former says he is in better trim than he was in the previous contest. The combination of St. Yves and Svanberg may prove very troublesome, as the full distance favors the little Frenchman greatly. The Finns are outsiders in the betting. The following prices were furnished by a well-known bookmaker: Shrubb and Woods, 6 to 5; Holmer and Queal, 8 to 5; Meadows and Woods, 7 to 2; St. Yves and Svanberg, 6 to 1; Kohlemainen and Nieminen, 12 to 1.

Hoppe Wins Handicap Billiards.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 28.—In a handicap billiard match played here to-night Willie Hoppe defeated Joseph Mayer of this city by a score of 400 to 288 in the first block. The match calls for Hoppe to play 1,200 to Mayer's 900, at 18.1. Hoppe's best runs were 89 and 64, and his average was 11 26-34. Mayer made high runs of 34 and 29, and had an average of 8 24-33.

Louderback Beaten in Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Boston won over Brooklyn in the National Billiard League game of three-cushion carrom at the Imperial Billiard Parlor's to-night. Macon of Boston made 50, with a high run of 4, while Louderback of Brooklyn made 49, with a high run of .. The play will be renewed to-morrow night.

St. Louis Wins Over Chicago.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 28.—E. V. Calmer of St Louis to-night defeated J. Krulewick of Chicago in the first game of the Chicago and St. Louis series in the National amateur three-cushion billiard tournament, 50 to 36, in 96 innings. Calmer's run of 8 is high in the tournament. Krulewick made a high run of 4.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.—What little animation was displayed in the market yesterday was chiefly on the selling side, and while there were rallies at different times they were of a spasmodic character and generally feeble. Offerings on the bulges tended to increase, and during most of the day prices ruled below the previous night's finals, although changes at the end of the session were insignificant. Liverpool advices failed to offer any impetus toward trading either way, but, on the whole, early news was unfavorable to holders. Broomhall issued his Argentine exportable surplus, placing the amount available at from 92,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels. This was rather bearishly construed, inasmuch as recently there was another report received from a reliable authority figuring 82,000,000 bushels as a total for export. Cash advices were also bearish, with mills at the Northwest only buying sparingly, and flour reports of a rather discouraging tenor. The selling, however, was not of an aggressive character, and when the visible supply was issued, showing a rather unexpected decrease, there was quite a little covering of shorts by early sellers. A reduction in stocks for the week was indicated of 1,168,000 bushels, of which the American decrease amounted to 834,000 bushels. The total visible now amounts to 54,533,000 bushels, against 39,417,000 bushels last year and 55,572,000 bushels two years ago. This factor, however, only had but temporary influence, and on the slight bulge renewed pressure developed, with prices closing not far from the low of the session. It continues dry in many sections of the Southwestern Winter wheat belt, and there was quite a little buying by a prominent operator on damage reports received. While many authorities are skeptical toward regarding these complaints seriously at the present time there is but little doubt that rain would be beneficial for the best development of the plant, although moisture may not urgently be required. The absence of important export demand was also a factor toward the late heaviness, with some selling influenced by favorable Russian crop prospects. Export sales amounted to 32,000 bushels of Manitoba wheat at outports. Cash No. 2 red quoted at 96¼c, elevator, and 95¾c, free on board, afloat, for export; No. 2 hard Winter, $1.01¼; No. 1 Northern Spring, $1.15⅜; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.04¼.

CORN.—The range in the corn market was comparatively small, with the undertone quite steady in the early trading. The display of strength was in face of continued bearish country advices and good weather, and was caused by a continuation of the short covering movement recently in evidence. On the advance, however, offerings were more liberal, with considerable selling, induced by the weak cash markets. The fact that export bids are close to working basis, however, was an offsetting feature, with the decrease in the visible supply also having a stimulating effect for a time. The week's statement showed a total of 1,452,000 bushels in stock, against 3,288,000 bushels last year. This was a decrease of 903,000 bushels. Export business amounted to 128,000 bushels at New York. Cash No. 2 forward shipment corn quoted at 52¼c, free on board, afloat, for export.

OATS.—A good undertone was manifest in the market during the day, with the good cash demand prevailing restricting bear operations. Short covering was also in sufficient volume to prevent a decline, but on the bulge selling by Western interests was noticeable. The visible supply for the week showed a decrease of 179,000 bushels, against a decrease last week of 449,000 bushels and a decrease last year of 233,000 bushels. Cash standards quoted at 37½c; No. 2 white, 38c, and No. 3 white, 37c.

PROVISIONS.—Provisions were firm during the entire session. Although receipts were liberal, hog values were higher and there was considerable buying by interests in close touch with stock yards. Packers sold for a time on the advance, but offerings caused but little pressure.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Decided weakness prevailed in the oil market during yesterday's session, and it was evident by the large amount pressing for sale that liquidation was emanating from prominent interests. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that a leading refining concern was selling as fast as the market could absorb offerings, but guesses as to what this was against were rather mixed. Bears claimed that, although crude oil in the South is being held firm, the demand was insufficient to bring into effect a higher range of values, and that the selling which was recently experienced was probably against seed purchases. At all events, support rendered was inadequate, and on the small bulges offerings tended to increase. Sentiment is decidedly mixed, and it is evident that a large speculative interest is being formed on both sides of the market, with usual influences such as fluctuations in lard and cotton having but small effect at the present time.

COFFEE.

Coffee was easier, with increased offering both for local and foreign account. The selling movement appeared to be due largely to weakness in Europe, where Havre was 1 to 1¼ francs lower, with reports that about 40,000 bags of coffee had been tended on delivery. Hamburg was ¼ to ½ franc lower. Rio was steady, while Santos was inactive at a decline of 50 reis.

Sales here amounted to about 74,000 bags, and closing prices were at a net decline of 10 to 11 points, at about the low of the day. Cost and freight offers were generally firm but too much above the market to permit of business. Amount of coffee now afloat for the United States: 703,000, compared with 889,000 last year. Warehouse deliveries of Brazilian coffee at the United States ports last week were 131,995 bags, compared with 129,495 the previous week, and 194,602 last year. Spot coffee 13@13⅛ for Rio No. 7.

COTTON.

New high records were established in the later months at the opening yesterday morning, on the Liverpool cables, which were stronger than due. It was first December notice day, however, and upon the issuance of 75,000 notices the market turned weak, with general liquidation and short selling, which seemed to have a very depressing effect. December sold down 15 points, January 21, March 27, May 23, and July 17. There was very heavy selling by the ring, and a large amount of contracts were liquidated. Two large spot firms were said to be stopping the notices tendered by the other spot firms. At these lower prices the market turned stronger and advanced during the noon hour to a range of 10 points. Here the market acted in a nervous, hesitating manner, and lost part of the advance before the close. A prominent spot firm was credited with buying 20,000 bales of May, which had a good effect for a time. The belief in the Street seems to have become very well intrenched in a crop under 12,000,000 bales; and this is discouraging active bear aggressiveness. The Times-Democrat of New Orleans issued its estimate of 11,445,000 bales, exclusive of linters, and several firms that first estimated near 12,000,000 are now changing their estimates to about 11,250,000 bales. Manchester continues to report a very active business, with yarns firmer and cloths hardening, and while there may thus far be a little hesitation on the part of the Continent, it is probable improvement will soon set in. Advices from spot centres in the South continue optimistic, advances occurring at several points. A prominent Southern market leader estimates the ginning to December 1 at 95 per cent. of the crop, as the high prices, good weather, the freeze, and the general conditions have all combined to make the most rapid picking and ginning of this crop on record. During the last ginning period of eleven days there was ginned 1,424,000 bales. The next ginning period is for fifteen days, and estimates are out for the ginning of from 1,200,000 to 1,400,000 bales for the period, but the amount ginned as a percentage still varies, according to the market position. Sentiment is rather mixed, and it is evident that the public is still conservative owing to the recent advance; and also owing to the knowledge of an existing long interest in the market, whereas the bullish news discourages bearishness. Southern spots were unchanged to ⅛c advance, and New York spots quiet, 15 points decline from previous close. Middling uplands, 15c; middling Gulf, 15.25c.

THE PURE FOOD LAW—A MAGNIFICENT VICTORY

Never was such a law more needed than in this country, nor more welcome than to us, who have suffered enormously from the fraudulent imitation of popular labels. This law, some years ago, would have saved us hundreds of thousands of dollars. Yet, to our amazement, a law designed to protect honest manufacturers no less than the public, was immediately made the pretext for an attack upon our world-wide and previously unimpeached reputation. After a costly contest, lasting four years, we have gained a signal and complete victory: in doing which, we have also shown that the law is the just measure it was intended to be.

We have not, as the public has been led to believe, obstructed the PURE FOOD LAW nor opposed the views of the GOVERNMENT. We have simply resisted a mere Bureau's usurpation of authority, and its novel and preposterous theories, submission to which would have driven us out of the American market.

The story is almost incredible, and difficult to tell briefly; yet, in justice to ourselves, and to the patrons who have remained so splendidly loyal to us, we must outline the facts.

For generations, the one universally recognized impurity of Whisky has been FUSEL OIL, which we have always removed by distillation. The Bureau referred to, as late as 1904, insisted that to be "good for consumption" Whisky must have practically no FUSEL OIL.

Kentucky "Straight Whisky," when new, is rank with FUSEL OIL, but the makers always assured consumers that this noxious impurity was transformed by age into delightful ethers, etc. A few years ago it was found that age makes no change in the FUSEL OIL except to remove its vile odor. The Kentucky distillers, knowing well the aversion to FUSEL OIL, were in desperate straits; so they boldly declared that REAL Whisky new or old, must contain all the FUSEL OIL, and denounced all REFINED WHISKY as a base imitation. And the Bureau backed them up.

This is no pleasantry, but sober fact. CANADIAN CLUB WHISKY was condemned, solely because it contains practically no FUSEL OIL.

Some months ago, President Taft, after a searching investigation by the Solicitor-General, overruled the Bureau completely. Now the Attorney-General has decided that the PURE FOOD LAW does not require our label to be changed by a single letter.

At the WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION in 1893, Dr. H. W. Wiley, then, as now, Chief of the Bureau referred to, reported CANADIAN CLUB to be "pure and fully up to the examination required," and, by authority of Congress, it received an award for "Fine aroma, very pleasant taste, thorough maturity, purity and absence of alien matter," which expresses every excellence any whisky can possess. CANADIAN CLUB is the same now as then.

If any consumers really want FUSEL OIL in their whisky, they should use Kentucky "Straight Whisky:" CANADIAN CLUB will not suit them. All who desire that the PURE FOOD LAW shall be rationally administered, and not as the weapon of any one man, should send for our History of this remarkable case. Please name this paper.

TOMMY MURPHY DEFEATS BEECHER

Harlem Boy Whips Eastsider Severely in Ten Rounds at Olympic A. C.

Harlem Tommy Murphy, who was recently defeated by Knockout Brown, came back in winning style last night and by superior work at all stages of the bout earned a decision over Willie Beecher in ten rounds at the Olympic A. C. In only one round did the milling favor Beecher. This was in the fifth, when he showed a good burst of speed and got to the Harlemite with some hard body blows that troubled Murphy, and on one other occasion in the following round matters ended on about even terms, while all the other sessions went to Murphy without a question of doubt.

Murphy displayed superior generalship throughout and landed the best and most telling blows from all angles. Beecher used his famous boring-in tactics throughout the ten rounds, and did some clever work at close range, where he repeatedly landed with telling effect, and then with an occasional swing, that usually landed on Murphy's ear, caused that organ to swell perceptibly. This was the worst mark Murphy showed, as his face was hardly marred, except for a slight swelling on the lower right eye. Beecher showed marks of hard punishment both on the face and body, as his nose was almost flattened upon his face, and his body was red from the terrific work of Murphy, which was done by his short arm jolts.

Murphy worked a clever left-hand jab at all times with apparent ease and in the clinches excelled his opponent in using short right and helf-hand hooks in clever style. Beecher at times became dazed at the way the blows were directed at him, and he swung wildly, scoring with his open hand, which did little harm.

The men went at their task in earnest from the first tap of the bell, and there was never a quiet moment from that time until the last gong sounded. The pair went to close range at the start and Beecher hammered away at Murphy's body with all his might, but Murphy drew Willie around in front of him and worked a series of short-arm jolts, while the East Sider battered his ribs. After breaking away, Beecher sent over a hard left to the face and the pair sparred for the remainder of the round with honors slightly in favor of Murphy.

At the opening of the second Murphy came out of his corner with a rush, and was upon Beecher before he had taken to step from his corner, but missed a left jab. He then scored with a right and left on the face in quick succession, which he followed with three easy jabs. The pair clinched, and both work fast, exchanging blows at an even rate. After separating Murphy sent in a hard right and crossed over a left, both of which landed on the face and had Beecher in a bad way, but he came back and fought well for the rest of the round. This was Murphy's round.

Murphy started a right to the face in the third round, and then went to a clinch, where he worked short left hooks to Beecher's chin in quick succession, and after squaring off shot a left to the face, while Beecher was laying for a chance to score.

Murphy had all the better of the work throughout the rest of the battle, but Beecher put up a hard struggle in the final round, but was tired and more worn out than Murphy.

ANTI-FIGHT PEOPLE AROUSED.

Want Promoters and Nelson and Moran Punished in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 28.—With a view to reviving the opposition to prize fighting in California, which was started at the time of the Jeffries and Johnson contest, J. E. White, attorney for the San Francisco Church Federation, to-day addressed a letter to District Attorney Finckert asserting that the law was violated by the Nelson and Moran fight last Saturday. White wrote that citizens were anxiously waiting to learn what action would be taken in the matter.

District Attorney Finckert said that if the law was violated by promoters and principals of the Nelson-Moran fight, the attorney for the Church Federation could swear out complaints. Mr. Finckert intimated that he personally would take no action.

Moran After Pal Moore.

Owen Moran is after Pal Moore and if Abe Attell fails to stop the Philadelphian at the Fairmont A. C. to-morrow night Moran will guarantee to whip him before any club that is willing to offer the necessary inducements. Moran, however, will not have to beg for a match with Moore. The latter, with a big advantage in weight, is confident that he can hold his own with Attell and there are a great many others who share in this confidence. Moore is coming to the front faster than any little man we have ever had around here, and the fact that a few months ago he whipped Jem Driscoll makes him look formidable for the bout to-morrow night. He is at least five pounds heavier and is stronger than when he outpointed Driscoll. Attell is tackling the biggest task in his career when he takes on a lightweight of Moore's prowess. Still he feels confident that he can get away with the Philadelphian. But Attell must be better than he ever was to do the trick. His title may not be at stake, but his reputation is. Frank Conley will be at the ringside to-morrow night to challenge Attell. He wants to bet 2 to 1 that he can overcome Attell in a twenty-round bout.

Grant Does Not Want to be a Red.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Nov. 28.—Third Baseman Grant, who was obtained by the Cincinnati Nationals in a trade with Philadelphia, has not signed his contract for next season with the local team, and word comes from Boston which says that Grant probably will refuse to sign. He is said to like Philadelphia better than Cincinnati. Grant is in Philadelphia, where he is to hold a conference with Manager Dooin of the Philadelphia team in order to ascertain if it will not be possible for him to remain there and play next season.

SOWELL NOT BADLY HURT.

Navy Quarter Back, with Broken Rib, Will Be Out in a Week.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 28.—Announcement was made at the Naval Academy to-day that the injuries sustained by Midshipman Ingram C. Sowell, the Navy's quarterback in the Army-Navy game on Saturday, are not as serious as at first thought and that the young man will be out within a week if everything continues to go well. He was reported as having no fever and was suffering no pain.

Sowell suffered a broken rib and a punctured lung in the first few minutes of play on Saturday, but he pluckily remained in the game until the end.

COLLEGE HOCKEY MEN ON ICE

Columbia, Yale, and Princeton Getting Into Form at St. Nicholas Rink.

Yale, Princeton and Columbia, three of the teams in the Intercollegiate Hockey League, have begun practice at the St. Nicholas Rink in anticipation of some exhibition games before the regular championship season begins. The New Haven team has picked out a rather difficult proposition for itself in the St. Paul's School team, which it is scheduled to meet on Dec. 21 in the opening game of the season. It was the Princeton team which elected last year to meet the sturdy youngsters from New Hampshire in what was thought to be a one-sided game, but the latter surprised their 'varsity rivals by putting up a finely contested fight, finally beating them by a score of 4 to 0. It was this defeat, however, that stimulated the Tigers to condition themselves for a hard championship series, which resulted in their winning the Intercollegiate title in the final game with Harvard.

Following the Yale-St. Paul game, Princeton and Williams will play at the St. Nicholas Rink. As yet none of the college teams have done enough to justify any predictions regarding their comparative strength. The Yale squad under the direction of the veteran Tom Howard numbers about thirty men, but so many of the best players of last season were lost through graduation that an almost entirely new team will have to be organized. Princeton is almost as badly off for seasoned players as the Elis, having lost among others Peacock, the captain and the best goalkeeper in the league, as well as Read, who was invaluable to the team. The squad, however, which is a large one, has been practicing well under Coach Ballin, and the latter is sanguine of his ability to pick out a well-balanced team of players.

Percy Le Seur, the goalkeeper of the Ottawa team, former professional champions of Canada, is coaching the Columbia boys, and although he was not enthusiastic at the beginning says now that he will put out a team that will give the best of the local sevens a good fight for the honors. He says there is more promising material in the youngsters than he has ever seen in a college squad, and they are all so enthusiastic and eager to play that he will find it difficult to discriminate in the selection of the best when the time comes to pick the team. Harvard is practicing at the Cambridge Stadium and reports from there say that the outlook is better for a good team than it was even in 1909, when, under the late Captain Willetts, Harvard won the championship.

MILTON HENRY RETURNS.

American Jockey and Nash Turner to Start Big Racing Stable.

Milton Henry, the American jockey, who has been riding on the French turf during the past seven years for Barons Edward and Augustus Rothschild and M. de Bramand, returned yesterday with his wife on the German liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria. Henry described France as the "greatest racing country in the world." He spoke enthusiastically of the polite sportsmanship of the members of the French Jockey Club and the patrons of racing in that country. He also says France is an ideal racing centre.

Henry, who has accumulated a fortune in stock on the Paris Bourse through his racing connection with the Rothschilds, contemplates starting a big racing stable in France. He expects to form a partnership with Nash Turner, formerly an American jockey, who has developed into a trainer and owner, and who is due to return to this city the first week in December.

The pair will visit Kentucky and Tennessee together for the purpose of purchasing a number of brood mares and stallions, which they expect to get at exceptionally low prices owing to the unsettled condition of racing in the United States. Preference will be given to horses of French or English ancestry.

Turner has a large estate near Chantilly, where the two former American jockeys intend to establish a breeding farm and will train their own horses for the French tracks.

Readville Track for Fair Grounds.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—The Readville race track has been sold, it was stated to-day, to a syndicate headed by William H. Minton of Boston. The plant will be remodeled for the purpose of holding agricultural fairs, and it is proposed to construct a half-mile track inside the present mile track and make over the rest of the inclosure into a forty-acre lawn. The property has been owned the last two and a half years by Andrew J. Welch of Hartford, Conn.

Turfman Bedwell Still Under Ban.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 28.—The State Racing Commission to-day declined to reopen the case of Guy Bedwell, the Colorado turfman, ruled off for alleged "doping" of a horse at Latonia. He appealed for rehearing. His written appeal was received and filed, but not considered.

All tracks in Kentucky were assessed $10.72 for each racing day of the season. The commission did not take up any proposed amendments to rules, but adjourned until Dec. 28.

Nash Turner's Horse Wins.

SAINT OUEN, France, Nov. 28.—The Prix de la Vranchin run here to-day was won by Nash Turner's Mon Cauchois.

National League Meeting Dec. 13.

Thomas J. Lynch, President of the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs, yesterday sent the following letter to all club Presidents:

"The annual meeting of the National League will be held Tuesday, Dec. 13, 1910, at 2 o'clock P. M. at The Breslin, New York City. The Board of Directors will meet at the same hotel at noon of this date."

Farrell Goes to Hot Springs Again.

Frank J. Farrell, President of the New York American League baseball team, went to Hot Springs, Va., yesterday for a stay of several weeks. Since the baseball season closed in the Fall, Mr. Farrell has been in poor health, and went away shortly after the season closed. He returned to the city a week ago to arrange his business affairs so that he could be away for several weeks longer.

Minneapolis Gets "Rube" Waddell.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 28.—The Minneapolis Baseball Club of the American Association to-day announced the purchase of Pitcher "Rube" Waddell from the St. Louis American team. Waddell played with Newark this year but was returned to St. Louis at the end of the season.

Winter Overcoats for Men $15 to $45

With each season, the term "overcoat" becomes less orthodox.

Instead of the one or two styles for which it formerly stood, the term overcoat now embraces outdoor garments as varied in form, in weight, in fabric as is the taste of man.

And quite as varied will you find our stock of overcoats at fifteen to forty-five dollars.

TWO DAYS' TEST FOR LOCAL AUTOISTS

Danbury and Newburg Objective Points in Endurance Runs.

Twenty-four cars will leave Columbus Circle at 8:30 o'clock this morning as competitors in the two days' run of the New York Automobile Trade Association. The entry list exceeds the expectations of those in charge of the run, and indicates that interest in touring contests does not cease with the approach of the frosty weather.

The objective point in to-day's run will be Danbury, Conn., while to-morrow the touring point will be Newburg, N. Y., the tourists returning to this city each evening. The mileage of each of the two days will be approximately 136 miles. The competition will be greatly stimulated by the several valuable trophies which have been offered by the G. & J. Tire Company, the Splitdorf Magneto Company, Stewart & Clarke, the Dorian Rim Company, the Cumberland Hotel, O'Donnell's Restaurant, Swan & Finch, Smith & Haynes, the W. C. P. Auto Supply House, the General Auto Supply Company, the Diamond Rubber Company, and E. T. Pelham.

The rain of last night will likely leave the roads in heavy condition, and the weather probabilities are not entirely in favor of a pleasant run. The officials are: A. R. Pardington, referee; Col. Pardee, honorary referee; H. C. Lawson, starter; A. McMurtry, A. Whiting, and H. Knepper, Technical Committee; A. Pisani and P. Kelley, pacemakers; G. Hare, F. Manning, Mark Allen, and L. "TEN REASONS" EXAMINED.

Our esteemed contemporary The World has assembled ten reasons in support of the Triborough route which we feel it a duty to examine as representative of the best which can be said in defense of a policy of subway building inconsistent with the interests of the city or its citizens. It is not an agreeable duty to seem to defend so unpopular a corporation as the Interborough, and to differ from a journal so deserving of respect as The World. It would be more popular to go with the crowd, to join the hue and cry against monopoly, to promise the people what they think they want, rather than advise them what they ought to want and would want if they were well informed and well advised. If we reject this easy way to the applause of the multitude it is solely from our conscientious conviction that we owe it to the readers who favor us with their confidence in such generous measure to give them our best and honest thought even if it should involve us in seeming to defend a corporation which they dislike and have some reasons for disliking. In our view the corporation doesn't count except so far as it is by force of conditions an indispensable instrument by which the city can alone supply itself with rapid transit in largest measure, in quickest time, for least money, and with incidental advantages to be mentioned. These are the considerations which control our opinions. Our position simply is that reason alone should guide, and that the reason should be controlled solely by considerations of rapid transit in the interest of the entire city and of all the fare payers. Borough jealousies, local real estate booms, theories of social or land reform, and many similar considerations which ought not so much as to be mentioned, come first in quarters where it is surprising that such things can be. It is because that is least true of The World that we examine its ten reasons. We quote from The World:

> Of many reasons why the city should build its own Triborough subway system at once, these are best worth pondering:
> 1. It proposes forty-four miles of new line, built section by section. The rival proposition covers scarcely more than a quarter as much mileage.

1. One line can be built section by section as well as another. There is no particular benefit in building that way; rather the contrary. There is an exceptional reason why the Triborough should be built gradually—it can only be built with bonds issued within the debt limit. City bonds for the Interborough extensions may be exempt from the debt limit. The Interborough extensions can be built with least assistance from public money, and the cost of the Triborough would embarrass the city unless it were built by sections. What ought not to be done at all is no better for being done in that way. The total, and the result obtained for the total, would be the same. It would be better that even the Triborough should be built as an entirety were it possible. The argument that by building sectionally the city would escape embarrassment is of itself enough to alarm prudent financiers. The existing Subway was not built that way, and no railway which had an alternative would be built that way. The people would rather that it should be built as a whole, and in least time possible. It is no consolation when one section is done to be told that an equal length will be done in an equal time longer, and so on indefinitely. This is the longest and least satisfactory way of building, and is tolerable only as an alternative to municipal insolvency.

The comparison of mileage is apart from the point. If larger relief can be obtained by a shorter mileage, so much the better. That is the exact position regarding the Interborough extensions. Each mile added relieves eighty-two other miles already working, but at a disadvantage. North and south passengers are carried across town twice. West side passengers clog east-side tracks, and east-side passengers clog west-side tracks. Neither class of travel is able to ride straight to destination, or to transfer from one route to the other. A minimum mileage is necessary to separate these clashing currents of travel and to take them away from annoying each other. The larger Triborough mileage, which serves only one side of the town, repeats as an original error what is the result of an incomplete plan in the case of the Interborough. It is better to complete the old plan than to make a new mistake.

> It has been carefully planned. It is far superior in detail to the present line. Suggested changes of plan or route only play into the hands of the monopoly; they do not offer improvement.

2. It makes no difference with what care it has been planned. It is a second choice plan, and a second best plan, because when the Interborough system was planned it took first pick, and got the best. Care in planning cannot remedy defects inherent in the geography of the city. The city does not supply two routes each of which will serve both east and west sides and give privilege of both. It is better to complete the one such system which is possible than to provide two halves of two incomplete systems. Any fare payer who is thinking only of his personal convenience—and that is a controlling consideration, since the interests of the city cannot be served otherwise—cannot have an instant's doubt on which route he would get most for his money. The extravagant mileage of the Triborough is an annoyance, because it does not take people where they want to go.

The World's reason No. 3:

> With the McAdoo modification it solves the problem of the Pennsylvania Railroad station, where the passengers of a great railroad are landed without street traffic to accommodate them; and of the lower west side in general.

3. In the opinion of the Pennsylvania Railroad the McAdoo-Triborough does not meet the necessities of the travel to and from its station. It offers only two track facilities in that neighborhood, and a moving platform spur. It is a difference of opinion upon agreed facts, and expert authority is against The World. The point seems to argue itself.

The World's reason No. 4:

> It gives two new branch lines in the Bronx. The Interborough's "H" plan does not.

4. It is useless to provide new branch lines in the Bronx if those who ride on those branches are not taken where they want to go in Manhattan. The Interborough has good branches in the Bronx, and is proposing to extend both them and its elevated lines there. If the Bronx must choose it will get most by the Interborough lines in the Bronx, and they can reach desirable points in Manhattan in a manner impossible otherwise.

The World's reason No. 5:

> It includes two lines of subway through the heart of Brooklyn, besides the Fourth Avenue line, which is now being built. The Interborough "H" does nothing for Brooklyn, and the company does not even extend its present spur from Flatbush Avenue.

5. The Interborough proposes another tunnel for Brooklyn, and continuous rides through both. The Triborough provides no through service at all. Every passenger must change to get above Canal Street, and cannot reach many sections of Manhattan without two fares as well as two vehicles. The entire subject of fares is left unsettled in the Triborough scheme. Even Mr. McAdoo does not yet obligate himself to the single fare. The Triborough is to be built in divisions, and a separate fare on each division is possible in any case, and is a certainty if there are several operators. The Interborough proposes to extend its line to the Prospect Park Plaza, and out Eastern Parkway to Nostrand Avenue. This is a section which needs rapid transit more than the Triborough sections, and which promises development of an unlimited area. The Triborough runs into the ocean.

The World's reason No. 6:

> It brings these two Brooklyn lines to the edge of Queens Borough, ready for profitable extension. The Interborough monopoly does nothing for Queens and offers it nothing.

6. This is another case of difference of opinion on indisputable facts. The Triborough gets no nearer to Queens than the peak of the Broadway-Lexington loop, which is no nearer than the Eastern Parkway extension of the Interborough. One system does as little for Queens via Brooklyn as the other. But the Interborough affords a direct tunnel extension to Queens from Forty-second Street. The Queens people do not undervalue this.

The World's reason No. 7:

> It will ultimately bring Richmond Borough into connection with the rest of the city by way of Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn, and the Narrows tunnel. No rival proposition so much as mentions Richmond.

7. It is risking little to say that the Interborough is as likely to reach Richmond as the Triborough. Neither will reach it within any future interesting to living Richmondites. Richmond is likelier to reach Manhattan through the McAdoo tunnels, without reference to the Triborough route. The shorter the tunnel ride the better. Joy rides are not taken underground. A tunnel ride between Richmond and Manhattan cannot be expected for 5 cents, and would not be taken if it were given. The ferry from the Battery could beat it in time, and would be preferred. Would the city build a tunnel to bankrupt its ferry line, as it built bridges to bankrupt the ferries of private owners? If the Richmondites get the Triborough tunnel they will lose their ferry.

The World's reason No. 8:

> It will be the city's own property much more truly than the present line. Under the new law the city at any time after ten years can take over the lease, if dissatisfied with the manner of its operation. It could not take over the new lines of the Interborough, no matter how great its dissatisfaction, for those lines could not well be used without the rest of the Interborough, which is operated on long lease.

8. The Interborough road is the city's property absolutely. The Interborough Company is merely lessee. The Interborough bonds will be amortized in less than fifty years, of which several have already elapsed. The Interborough must then divide its large profits with the city upon a readjustment of rental. The larger the profits the better for the city. When does The World think that the Triborough bonds will be amortized? Can it be said that the city is truly owner as long as the mortgage is outstanding, and when the road is under contract of operation by Mr. McAdoo, let us say, as truly as the Interborough is? Would the city be dissatisfied if the Triborough carried twice as many passengers as expected, or does the city think that if such a traffic were developed it could take over the road without cost for equipment and incidentals which it would puzzle it to pay for after having exhausted itself in construction? Of course the city could not take over the Interborough extensions. Why should it wish to? Their greatest usefulness is in connection with the main line, which is the city's property. What good sense hath joined together let no man put asunder. The Triborough would fall apart easily, being composed of unrelated stub ends.

The World's reason No. 9:

> It gives the city two subway systems instead of one. If the city pays for the Interborough extensions it can build nothing else until they are finished and earning their cost. If the city builds its own line the Interborough must make improvements with its own money or be "pocketed" by a better system. And it will do it.

9. Two systems are objectionable. What city has two systems? New York was better served when it had a single surface system. The unified management of the elevated roads is beneficial. The two halves of the Interborough would be better than the same two halves operated separately. If the Triborough were built it would be much more useful if operated with the Interborough, however inconveniently. And it would be prudent for the city not to calculate too certainly on what the Interborough "must" do. If it secures the Interborough extensions the city can construct whatever it wishes, and is certain of controlling the future. The more prudent way is for the city to postpone whatever is under its sure control and to take whatever there is any doubt about getting while it is obtainable. Before now the city has rejected Interborough proposals and regretted their withdrawal. Extensions made by the Interborough "with its own money" will cost the city (which eventually pays the bill) at least 100 per cent. more than if the funds are originally secured on city credit. The Interborough will pay 6 per cent. for its money on its own estimate of cost, whereas the city can now fix the cost of the extensions and secure the money at 4 per cent. and under the existing contract require the Interborough to pay interest and amortization and hold a first lien on the property of the Interborough for the enforcement of the contract.

The World's reason No. 10:

> Even if in every other respect the rival propositions were more nearly balanced, one great fact would remain. The city has tried monopoly. It has seen monopoly gripping its 18 per cent. privilege, and doing nothing to relieve the shocking congestion of traffic. It has no more faith in monopoly. If the city must put its own money into subways it is better to have a complete independent system. It is better to finance competition than to finance monopoly.

10. Why is it better to finance competition than monopoly? The phrase is catching, but does it mean anything? What fair grievance has the city against this particular monopoly? It earns 18 per cent., but would The World have it carry half as many people, and earn 9 per cent.? The task of excusing the management of the Interborough is one for which we have no liking. In many ways we agree with The World about its short-sighted management, and in our view it hardly measures up to its opportunities, and might do better for itself if it saw its way to do more for the city. But it has been better than its contract, and its grip is so weak that its tunnel to Queens has lain idle for years for lack of a franchise which it cannot extort from a sentiment which it has made hostile by its procedure. To call it a monopoly in the obnoxious sense is unfair. Its service is absolutely regulated by law, and is of the same quality as the Triborough's must be if the laws are administered equally. We urge The World not to allow its dislike of this corporation to cloud its judgment, and not to assume a position accordant with those whose laws and policy have harmed the city and delayed rapid transit more than the Interborough, which after all has given the city a large measure of rapid transit, of quality so excellent after all abatements that the city wants more.

MILWAUKEE'S MUNICIPAL DANCE.

Milwaukee had its municipal ball, but, alas! some of the gentlemen wore dress suits and some of the ladies fancy gowns—that is to say, gowns so described by Milwaukee's socialistic Mayor. The ball was so successful that another is to be given. Society, fashionable and merely official, commingled freely with workingmen and workingwomen. This description of the company is not our own. We see no reason why there should be social classes in Milwaukee or any other American city. But we have not taken to the idea of a ball given by the city. Our idea of the functions of city government has never included social entertainments.

But Milwaukee has had its first socialistic city ball, no harm has come of it, no rows over hat checks are reported, no "gent" quarreled with another "gent" about a lady, everybody was satisfied, the official "introducers" did their work well, and we are glad of it. The only discordant note was the inequality of dress. One girl would wear a muslin shirtwaist and a cloth skirt and another soft folds of creamy crêpe de chine. Probably the shirtwaist girl had a soft, creamy crêpe de chine of her own at home which she keeps for more select occasions. Milwaukee's municipal balls are novel, and worth watching. At the next one shirtwaists and sack coats will dominate, undoubtedly, and the dance will be as democratic as the Mayor can wish. He thinks these dances "will make for the betterment of the city." We are willing to wait to learn how public dances can improve a city.

WOMAN'S PHYSIQUE.

Why should Dr. Sargent, Director of the Harvard Gymnasium, conclude from his composite model of 10,000 women measured since 1890 that the woman of to-day is "more mannish" than her mother?

We are quite willing to agree with the Doctor that golf, tennis, running, swimming, gymnastics, calisthenics, and the more sensible habits of dressing affected by women in the last score of years have resulted in an improvement of individual physique and a change of individual measurements. The mere substitution of the corset for the corset-waist would result in a waist of larger girth, and would encourage the development of a band of muscles in this region where muscles were artificially atrophied. The broader and stronger shoulders, relatively smaller hips, and thicker neck and ankles represented in Dr. Sargent's composite model are readily explainable from the known effects of physical training. But muscular development has always been possible for women as well as for men. Dr. Sargent himself says that it is characteristic of women in the savage state. Why should he presume that it is essentially masculine, and that its acquirement by women means "a loss of sex"?

Are the Chinese lady's stunted feet a feminine characteristic? Had the undeveloped feet, back, neck, and sloping shoulders and wasp-waists of our grandmothers' time anything whatever to do with their sex or with a "feminine type"? If Dr. Sargent is really considering changes in the essential structure of woman, he is flying in the face of all knowledge of the alteration of types in asserting that such changes can take place in a generation. Ten thousand generations might produce some minute changes.

A SCHOOL OF SALESMANSHIP.

The proceedings of the recent meeting in Boston of the National Association for the Promotion of Industrial Education show that the firms of five co-operating department stores in Boston deem it worth while to send the girls they employ to the Union School of Salesmanship, which is conducted by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union. These firms not only send the girls to this school, but pay them full wages during the three months' course of morning sessions. The pupils report for work in the stores at 12:30 each day, after the morning lectures by representatives of the firms, discussions of experience, and demonstrations of selling particular classes of goods. The "one-price" system, with a policy of exchanging goods and making up deficiencies, has done away with the need of teaching pupils to bargain with their customers. But they are taught instead a very efficient personal service.

In all trades and occupations the establishment of so-called "units of efficiency" is being sought, sometimes with surprising results. Shopgirls, foremen, department heads, and even employers and owners are going to school to learn better ways.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

An Artist and His Conscience.

That a good deal of history was written with other objects than that of telling the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth is no secret. The historians, in their comments on each other, have taken effective care that it should not be one, and because of the wide diffusion of this knowledge all except particularly unsophisticated readers of history make due allowance for the politics, prejudices, enthusiasms, and antagonisms of each of the older historians in judging the accuracy with which he tells what happened in the past.

Of late years, indeed, historians have developed a greater, or at least a different, conscientiousness—with the result, unfortunately, that most of them now present little more than what their predecessors would have called the material for history. This usually makes rather dull reading, and some of us are inclined to regret the dawn of the new era, though, of course, it wouldn't do to say so above a whisper.

Not a few painters have also essayed the recording, if not of history, at least of historic episodes, and it is the general assumption, probably, that, unintentional errors aside, these artists presented things as they were. For people who have believed this the revelation made by an article in The Sunday Times of the way in which facts perfectly well known to him were treated by the man who painted that fairly famous and often-reproduced picture, "The Last Spike," commemorating the completion of the first transcontinental railway, will give a disagreeable shock.

For Thomas Hill, it seems, painted the scene, not as it was, but as Leland Stanford, who had ordered the picture, thought would please his friends, pain his enemies, and enhance his own importance. People who were there the artist left out, some who were not there he put in, and still others he moved from the foreground to the background, or vice versa, as the Governor dictated. And then, after all, Stanford wouldn't pay for the picture!

Just why, at this late day, the artist's son should disclose these facts it is somewhat hard to understand. Such surprise as they cause will be directed, not at Gov. Stanford, since it was about what would be expected from him, but at the painter, and the latter it does not present in a light at all pleasing—for those of us who like to think of artists as working for something else than money.

Christmas Trees to be Taxed.

A tax of 25 cents will be imposed on every Christmas tree taken out of Vermont if a bill now before the State Legislature should pass, and, according to a dispatch from Montpelier, it is likely to do so. The announced purpose of the bill is to let the little conifers grow up to be valuable timber, instead of cutting them down in their tender infancy. That is a highly commendable idea, at least so far as motive goes, but according to all the best authorities, the young evergreens of the kind that make the best or even tolerable Christmas trees will never amount to much as lumber.

To be of festival use they must be well branched from the top to close to the ground, and such trees are usually found rather widely scattered over pastures and clearings, where each has room for lateral growth. Forestry planting, natural or artificial, is after a fashion quite different, the seedlings being placed so close together that they have to do most of their growing upward, the lower branches dying off rapidly one after the other as light fails them, before they have a chance to make big knots in the main trunk. That is the only way that "clear" lumber can be produced. At any rate, it is the only way it is produced, and the seedlings, or saplings, are worthless as Christmas trees.

The Vermont law, therefore, if passed, would put the State out of the running as a purveyor of these trees, and it would do little or nothing toward extending the area of forest land. Worst of all, probably, the tax would irritate those who suffered from its application, since they are just the people who would understand its absurdity, and so it would tend to perpetuate the old prejudice against forest preservation as sentimental and unpractical. As a matter of fact, scientific forestry is neither. It asks no woodman to spare that tree any more than it asks the gardener to spare that cabbage or that potato; it simply entreats him to spare the forest, which is an entirely different matter, and highly profitable in more than one way. A forester might, indeed, grow Christmas trees, if he found that there was a good market for them, but he would cut them down as soon as they were ripe—as Christmas trees—and do his timber-growing on other land.

Rev. Dr. Aked and the Daily Newspapers.

When newspapers are discussed in pulpits, they are almost always charged with printing only crimes and horrors, and usually they are exhorted to mend their ways and devote all their space to exploitation of the good, the true, and the beautiful. In other words, they are accused of giving the news and asked to abandon the habit.

We notice with satisfaction, therefore, that Dr. Aked on Sunday preached a sermon in which he frankly recognized the fact that for a thing to be news it must contain some element of the exceptional, and that while the good citizen going quietly about the performance of his duties is a highly commendable element in the community, he must in some way vary his routine before he becomes a claimant for newspaper attention. But while Dr. Aked admitted this, he seemed to regret the necessity for doing so, and we can't for the lives of us see why he should.

That is the way the world was made. The newspaper is only a collection of the things that people here, there, and everywhere are noticing and talking about. Its critics do daily in their narrower field exactly what they condemn it for doing in its wider. At home and on the street and in their shops they observe, comment upon, and are interested in the more or less exceptional. And there is no ground whatever for the charge—Dr. Aked didn't make it, by the way—that the newspapers care only for the criminal and the horrible. Some of them, like some people, have reprehensible leanings that way, but the great majority of them are at least as ready to exploit the virtues as the vices, joyous events as sad ones. And they do it, every day in the year, to an extent which in the aggregate is certainly large, and probably exceeds the chronicling of criminality and misfortune.

It is news when a man goes wrong, and it is not news when he merely stays right. Were this not so the world would be a place indeed miserable and wicked—which, everything considered, it isn't.

SOCIALISTS AS JURORS.

Are Called Upon to Serve and Do Well, He Thinks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is both curious and amusing to observe what absurd notions some people entertain when they happen to think about Socialism in relation to public questions, otherwise the query asked by "Independent" in to-day's Times, as to whether or not Socialists are ever drawn for jury duty, would not have been asked at all.

As one who has always enrolled and voted for the Socialist ticket during the past ten years, I can inform him that I have been a number of times called for jury duty, and in no instance have I been questioned regarding my political opinions by the proper authorities. If, therefore, the "exceptionally well educated and neither an Anarchist or Socialist" friend of Independent has enrolled as a Socialist with the avowed purpose to avoid being drawn as a juror, I can assure him that he need not expect the relief sought for from that direction. The fact of his being a teacher might be a reason for excuse by the court before which he may be summoned to appear.

The average Socialist, I believe, makes an excellent juror, for he is generally a well-read, well-intentioned, and public-spirited citizen who takes his duties rather seriously and who will not cast his ballot on the strength of some other juror's opinion, and who will not allow himself to be bullied by a majority of the jurors if he thinks the evidence points to some different verdict than that agreed upon by others.

Socialism and jury duty are not incompatible. The first is, strictly speaking, a political belief; the second relates entirely to the administration of justice, which all understand is entirely independent of politics. JOSEPH MILTON.

Criminals and the Police.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Had we laws and speedy court trials dealing more extreme punishment to criminals without mercy, especially for confirmed criminals, our municipalities might reduce their police force to a comparatively few men, and the expense of police and criminal courts to smaller proportions.

What will our Legislatures and courts do for the public, for taxpayers, to remedy this evil? They have the power. They are public servants. Are they serving the public well? Are they looking after the public welfare? Add to the punishment of criminals and reduce the police force and court and prison expenses. C. E.

FUNDS FOR SUFFRAGE.

Mrs. Blatch Says Money Lying Ready Is Limitless.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From an interview in The Times I gather that some suffrage leaders, in complaining of their bankrupt condition, declare that money contributed to the English movement is just so much taken from our work in America. They seem to hold that the amount which can be raised for suffrage is a fixed quantity. Of course, this idea is as mistaken as the exploded theory held by the old Manchester school of economists as to a wage fund. The money lying ready for suffrage is limitless. How to tap the reservoir is the only problem. Chinatown would contribute generously, if we but knew how to quicken the imagination of our brothers of the Celestial Empire. There is a way, could we but hit upon it, to force the closest fist to pay tribute.

To those who say that by inviting English women to America and paying them for their labor we rob our movement of just so much hard cash, the reply is that English suffragettes are a sound business venture. Ignoring the inspiration they have been to us, and having regard only to the practical question of dollars and cents, we who know declare that they earn for us more money than they take away.

The great meeting in Cooper Union held by the Equality League of Self-Supporting Women (now the Women's Political Union) for Mrs. Cobden Sanderson two years ago netted us some $200. The Carnegie Hall meeting of a year ago put in our treasury, after all expenses were paid, Mrs. Pankhurst's fee included, $1,000.

Past experience makes us confident that we shall profit by Sylvia Pankhurst. The young woman has something to tell which Americans wish to hear. We shall gladly pay her her fee, for we know there is no fixed suffrage fund any more than a fixed wage fund. We can only recommend to all doubters the wisdom of the old saying, "Nothing venture, nothing have."

CITY CHURCH BELLS.

The Call to Worship Thought to be Out of Date.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There's a nice, peaceful little church nestling in a nook at the corner of 181st Street and Broadway. In appearance it is attractive, unobtrusive, and self-respecting, and in that I have no doubt it reflects the mind and manner of its congregation. One could admire a church like that. It must have been there for years, for many people go there on Sunday to be refreshed and strengthened by the worship they seek.

It must have been there for years, for at 7:30 or thereabouts each Sunday morning a brazen bell is still clanged in its belfry, resounding, reverberating through apartment buildings in the near neighborhood which house, at a conservative estimate, 6,000 private individuals. Traditional sentiment is commendable, and probably the fervent little church has never stopped to consider seriously that times have changed since its cornerstone was laid. That is quite conceivable, for the people of that church must have been very busy doing good. In those early days it was doubtless necessary to ring a bell to summon the congregation to worship—it surely was in the times of our Puritan forefathers.

But now it would seem unnecessary for a congregation that can scarcely number 600 to disturb the needed or desired rest of these 6,000 men, women, and babies in the immediate neighborhood. The 5,400 individual residents, to be exact, who are shocked into wakefulness each Sunday morning at 7:30, willy-nilly, might consider the offense mitigated if pleasing chimes were sounded instead of alarming bells.

Surely, if the pleasant little church ever stopped to consider how it intruded on the peace, privacy, and comfort of 5,400 people of other faiths—Christians, Jews, Christian Scientists, Mohammedans, New Thoughtists, atheists, and followers of Swami—perhaps it would silence the startling clapper and summon its members by telephone, telegraph, or some other modern, unobtrusive method to contribute their tenth of the neighborhood's worship to the Lord.

The Irish Language Revival.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your well-intentioned correspondent "H.," who wrote on the Irish language revival in your issue of the 24th inst., is misinformed with regard to the present position of the movement. For instance, he says that "twelve short years ago 250,000 people knew how to speak Irish and a very few knew how to write it. To-day both classes know how to speak and write in their native tongue."

These statements are not in accordance with the facts, for, according to the census 700,000 were able to speak Irish twelve years ago. The number who can speak Gaelic to-day is probably greater, hence Irish instead of being a dead language, as many suppose, is very much alive.

Unfortunately the second statement re the two classes referred to above is only partially true, for only about 15 or 20 per cent. of native Irish speakers are able to read or write the vernacular, and it is to these the Gaelic League devotes most of its attention.

He is guilty of another curious statement, that the publications on the Irish language exceed those in English. He must surely have referred to the publications of one firm, probably M. H. Gill & Sons, the largest firm in Dublin, who, I understand, publish more books in Irish than in English. But to say that the number of publications in Irish "far exceeds those in English," is only a wild statement which is calculated to do more harm than service to the men and movement with whom "H." no doubt sympathizes. As Dead as 16 to 1.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Roosevelt after the elections declares he "has nothing whatever to add or take away from the declaration made at Osawatomie and elsewhere. The fight for progressive popular government has merely begun, and will certainly go on to a triumphant conclusion." Thus

"Hope springs eternal in the human breast;
Man never is, but always to be blest."

But whom is the doughty Colonel fighting, and what are the forces behind him? He must be fighting the great majority of voters who knew all about the Osawatomie speech and new Nationalism, and most emphatically have voiced its repudiation. They want none of it, and as an issue it is as dead as sixteen-to-one.

As for another declaration made by him in committee before the Saratoga Convention, "We must find out what the majority of the voters of this State require"; has he not found it out now—that their ideas of progressive popular government do not coincide with his own? "Vox populi vox Dei" as a social maxim holds good as of old, and does not require a new rendering to suit the ever-ambitious Colonel. VERITAS.

HUSH MONEY.

I can't pay the butcher or tailor,
It's got on my nerves quite a bit,
The bill of the latter's a whaler,
To think of it gives me a fit.
It's awful to have too much conscience,
Those Puritan ancestors—Oh!
I'd like to upset them—come, Fan, let's forget them,
We'll go take a box at the show.

The milkman is howling for money,
I know the poor fellow's hard pressed,
It strikes me as not at all funny,
In fact, I am deeply distressed.
I've far too much sympathy, really,
A fault that cannot be denied—
I need some distraction to cause a reaction,
Come, Fan, for a taxicab ride.

HEARS COMPLAINTS OF TELEPHONE RATES

Brooklyn Subscribers, in Particular, Object to Paying 10 Cents to Talk to Manhattan.

COMPANY'S HEAD EXPLAINS

Earnings Only 10 Per Cent. on Book Valuation, U. N. Bethell Tells Service Board.

Complaints as to the telephone rates to Brooklyn and Queens from Manhattan were heard yesterday by the Public Service Commission at a hearing in the United Engineers' Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street. Particular objection was raised to the ten-cent rate between Brooklyn and Manhattan, on the ground that since residents in the Bronx can telephone to their downtown offices for a nickel it is unreasonable that a man just across the river must pay twice as much. In his reply U. N. Bethell, President of the New York Telephone Company, contended that it was making only 10 per cent. on the book value of its tangible property, without reckoning the skill, ingenuity, and strict attention to business supplied, and that consequently there was no reason for a reduction in rates.

The hearing was a preliminary one to determine whether there was just cause for a formal inquiry by the commission. The first speaker was Russell Benedict, counsel for the Prospect Park South Association and the Flatbush Taxpayers' Association. He argued that if the telephone company was compelled to produce its books it would be easy to show that there was unlawful discrimination against Brooklyn, as compared with other boroughs. The ten-cent charge from Brooklyn to the lower end of Manhattan, he said, was unreasonable, when compared with the toll on a call over the much longer wire from the Bronx.

Ex-Controller Metz appeared to explain the attitude taken by the Manufacturers' Association.

"We don't claim," he said, "that the telephone company is doing anything wrong, and we admit that we have the best telephone service in the world, but we do think that the Manhattan-Brooklyn rates ought to be lower."

F. A. M. Birrell represented the views of the Board of Trade and Transportation in regard to the same matter, and Charles H. Davids, a mechanical engineer, had something to say from the Bronx. He complained that the subscribers there had to use old-fashioned instruments and that rates were unjust and often excessive.

The Brooklyn League and the Brooklyn Allied Boards of Trade also sent representatives to back up the complaints of the ten-cent toll, and then William B. Parsons of the Flushing Association took the floor to show that Queens was not altogether satisfied.

"If it were a city by itself," said he, "Queens would be the third largest in the State, and only seven cities in the entire country have a larger amount of assessed real estate. Yet our telephone charges are extortionate. An ordinary business man has occasion perhaps to use the wire ten times a day. That service will cost him $25 a month, besides the $5 paid by the subscriber for unlimited service, two and a half times as much as Brooklyn."

Mr. Bethell then spoke on behalf of the telephone company.

"I realize," he said, "that those who have spoken have been under a disadvantage as compared with myself. They have not had the same opportunity to study the subject. The problems connected with the telephone service of the city are extremely complicated. Our primary purpose has been to secure efficiency of service, and we have always believed that subscribers would be prepared to pay a little more to have it.

"The number of telephones in New York, with 4,600,000 people, is 398,905, a proportion of 8.7 per cent. In London the proportion is only 2.8 per cent., in Berlin 5.3, in Paris 2.5, and in Vienna 2 per cent. In this country the proportion in Chicago is 8 per cent., in Philadelphia 6.9, and in Boston 8.7 per cent.

"Our net earnings are less than 10 per cent. on the book value of our tangible property in this State. We carry no characterization of intangible assets. If you accept the estimate of them made by the Wisconsin Commission, our earnings would be practically on a 7 per cent. basis. But if you allow us no profit to skill, ingenuity, or our strict attention to business, we earn only about 10 per cent."

Mr. Bethell produced a chart to illustrate his points, and stated that the average length of a call in Manhattan and the Bronx is three miles, and in Brooklyn and Queens four and one-half miles, and in the two districts together seven and one-quarter miles.

"During the last five years," he went on, "there has been a steady move uptown of business concerns in Manhattan. Over 5,000 concerns have removed from below Twenty-third Street, and there has been a special movement from below Fourteenth Street to within easy reach of the new Pennsylvania Station. Every one must realize the bearing of this fact and the tremendous pull of the business centre of Manhattan toward the north.

"We always expect a certain number of complaints, and do our best to look into and remedy them. When Brooklyn suburbanites were allowed 900 calls, many protested because they had not used the full number and thought they were paying for something they had not used. We cut down the number to 400, and there was another howl, because we were not giving enough. Now we have compromised on 600, and still complaints come in.

"The principal complaint here seems to be about the Brooklyn-Manhattan rate, because the distance across the river is short, but if a man rides a street car for two blocks he must pay the same as if he goes to the end of the line, and so it is with telephone calls.

"Only 5 per cent. of the business originating in Manhattan and the Bronx is with Brooklyn, and if we were to distribute the burden borne by this 5 per cent. by a uniform charge throughout the city, to whom could it be shifted?"

In answer to a question Mr. Bethell said the net earnings of the Queens service is 4 per cent.

$46 FOR BURTON'S KASIDAH.

Other Rare Editions in the Bentham Collection Bring Good Prices.

A copy of the rare first edition of Sir Richard F. Burton's "The Kasidah of Haji Abdu El-Yezdi: A Lay of the Higher Law. Translated and Annotated by His Friend and Pupil, F. B.," brought $46 at the first session of the sale of the library and art collection of George Bentham in Anderson's yesterday. This work was privately printed in London in 1880, and only a few copies were issued by Sir Richard for his friends.

Haji Abdu El-Yezdi was one of Burton's noms de plume, and the poem was written in 1853 on his return from Mecca, twenty-seven years before he decided to publish it privately, and eight years before he saw Edward FitzGerald's translation of Omar Khayyam's Rubaiyat. FitzGerald showed his translation to Burton, Rossetti, and Swinburne in 1861.

The Kasidah is a poem on the nature and decay of man, anti-Christian and pantheistic. Justin McCarthy says it is known "but to a fortunate few" under the name of "The Tinkling of the Camel Bell."

Other interesting items were: First edition of Francis Bacon's "Two Bookes of the Proficience and Adornement of Learning, Divine and Humane," London, 1605, $40, and a first edition of his "Essays or Counsels, Civil and Morall," London, 1625, $37; the Bibliophile Society's "Odes and Epodes of Horace," $50, and its André's Journal, $48.50; first edition of A. O. Exquemelin's "Bucaniers of America," 4to, London, 1684, $56; the rare London, 1561, edition of Chaucer, $39; a two-page letter of Mark Twain to M. D. Conway, $16, and another of three pages to his lecture agent Redpath, refusing ever again to lecture in Brooklyn, $19.

RUSSIAN BALALAIKA ORCHESTRA CHARMS

Andreeff's Band of Twenty-five Play Peasant Instruments with Splendid Rhythm.

FOLK SONGS AND DANCES

Playing of "In a Pine Forest Roamed a Riderless Horse" Was Uncanny in Effect and Aroused Enthusiasm.

W. W. Andreeff brought his Russian Balalaika Orchestra, which has recently been playing in London, to Carnegie Hall last night, and the first appearance of this organization met with such flattering and well-deserved success that it is probable that it will be heard many times in this city during the current Winter.

Mr. Andreeff has made a most interesting experiment in adapting the Russian peasant instruments for concert use. His orchestra is composed of twenty-five men, who play three instruments—the balalaika, which slightly resembles the guitar; the domra, which is more like the mandolin, and the dulcimer, which may be compared to the harp. The dulcimer is not, of course, strictly a Russian instrument. The kind used last night had a keyboard for the left hand, while the right hand plucks the strings.

The balalaika itself ranges in size from that of a mandolin to almost that of a double bass.

The tone effect produced by this band, both in variety of color, delicacy, and organlike quality, is quite indescribable. Mr. Andreef has evidently studied the instruments very earnestly, and he has rehearsed his men with such great care that the most delicate nuances are produced with unerring effect. Too, the band plays with splendid rhythm.

In his arrangement of the programme Mr. Andreeff had fortunately chosen some very interesting Russian folk songs, which are exactly suited to the instruments used. Among these was one familiar one, the "Song of the Volga Boatman," which the modern Russians are fond of using in their composition and Giordano has utilized in "Siberia." Not before, however, in the experience of the present writer has the exact sense of inexorable rhythm and melody of this song been so wonderfully conveyed.

Another song which was played with superb effect was called "In a Pine Forest Roamed a Riderless Horse." A synopsis of this song instructs the listener to imagine a riderless horse, richly caparisoned, with hanging head indicative of intense fatigue. Near by on the ground lies his master, dead. The master is of noble, valorous features. The horse apparently mourns for his master and wanders around in a circle, neither eating nor drinking. Death on the battlefield is glorious, but this man's was almost ignominious, as he has fallen at the hands of robbers on a dark night. The playing of this song was uncanny in its effect and aroused the utmost enthusiasm.

Mr. Andreeff, who seems to be expert in his choice of contrasts, followed it with a sensuous waltz. There were several other folk-songs and dances in the programme, some of which stirred the blood and the programme was varied with other compositions. A passe-pied of Delibes, with some very pretty modulations, had to be repeated. Rodolphos's "Racconto" from "La Bohème" seemed to be scarcely suited to the orchestra's purposes.

Twice during the evening a man in Muscovite costume rolled a grand piano, with apparent ease, to the centre of the stage, and Miss Rita Fornia interrupted the proceedings of the orchestra to sing some Russian or Polish songs. In the first group she sang Rachmaninoff's "Floods of Spring," the shepherd song from Rimsky-Korskoff's "Svegoroutchka," which is being heard often these days, and a Chopin mazurka, arranged for voice by Mme. Pauline Viardot. Later she sang two songs by Tschaikowsky and Rubinstein's "Es Blikt der Thau."

GEO. F. SEWARD DEAD, INSURANCE HEAD

President of Fidelity and Casualty Company Dies at City Home in His 70th Year.

FLAYED ALBANY GRAFTERS

Testified at Investigation That Black Horse Cavalry Was Composed of Legislators of Both Parties.

George Frederick Seward, President of the Fidelity and Casualty Company, and one of the best known insurance men in the United States, died yesterday at his home, 136 West Seventy-third Street. He was born in Florida, N. Y., in 1840 and was educated there at Seward Institute, which had been founded by the family, and in 1856 he entered Union College, of which he, later in life, became a trustee and received the degree of LL.D. Mr. Seward's grandfather was a colonel in the Revolutionary army and his uncle, William H. Seward, served in President Lincoln's Cabinet as Secretary of State.

When he attained his majority Mr. Seward was appointed United States Consul to Shanghai and later Consul General with jurisdiction over all American Consuls in the Chinese Empire. In 1875 he was appointed United States Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary, which was then the highest rank in the American Diplomatic Service. During his service in China Mr. Seward received the Order of the Knights of Danebrog from the Danish Government in recognition of services rendered while acting as American Consul General and also the Decoration of the Dragon of Annam from the French Government for services rendered during the French riots at Shanghai.

On his return to this country he wrote a book called, "Chinese Immigration and its Social and Economic Aspects," which embodied the results of his investigations and experiences as President of the North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, an office which he held from 1865 to 1867.

In 1887 Mr. Seward became Vice President of the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York and six years later he became its President, an office that he retained till the time of his death. His success in the insurance business became so marked that he was speedily recognized as an authority in casualty insurance in the United States.

When William H. Hotchkiss, State Superintendent of Insurance, was investigating the pat relations of fire insurance companies to legislation affecting their business Mr. Seward gave important testimony at the hearing regarding the Black Horse Cavalry. He said, "When it comes to grafting at Albany there is no difference in the parties. There are Republican grafters and Democratic grafters. Years ago when I used to go to Albany and meet legislators they would ask me if there was any money in it. The Black Horse Cavalry was composed of men of both parties. But there was never a time when you couldn't rally a sufficient number of honest members against the Black Horse Cavalry to obtain honest legislation."

Mr. Seward was President of the Virginia Electrolytic Company, a Director in the Virginia Laboratory Company, Tin Products Company, and was a member of the American Geographical Society, Academy of Political and Social Science and Institute of Civics, Municipal League for Civic Reform, Philippine Progress Commission, New Jersey Historical Society, Authors' Club, Reform Club, and Lawyers' Club of this city, and was Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

In 1870 Mr. Seward married Miss Kate Sherman of California, who, with their four children, George O. Seward, Mrs. Marian Kaufman, Annie L. Seward, and Emma Seward, survives him.

His funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock from the Madison Square Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Dr. Parkhurst will officiate. Interment will be at Florida, N. Y.

"LOHENGRIN" AT THE OPERA.

A Performance More Notable for Energy Than for Poetry or Imagination.

Heinrich der Vogler	Allen Hinckley
Lohengrin	Hermann Jadlowker
Elsa von Brabant	Berta Morena
Friedrich von Telramund	Walter Soomer
Ortrud	Louise Homer
Der Heerrufer des Konigs	William Hinshaw

Conductor—Alfred Hertz.

"Lohengrin" was reached in the repertory of the Metropolitan Opera House last evening for the first time, when it was given for the benefit of the Monday subscribeds. It was in many outward respects a sumptuous performance, in the elaborate form in which Mr. Hertz had restudied the work last season, restoring certain passages often cut out. But both musically and dramatically it was a very strenuous one, in which almost everything was overdone and overaccentuated. It began with the orchestra, which was loud, rough, and coarse. There was little mellowness and refinement in the numerous passages for the wood wind instruments, from which Wagner derives effects so ethereal and poetic, and when it came to the building up of the great climaxes the crescendos developed sometimes into noise. Mr. Hertz likewise showed in certain passages an unwonted fondness for slow tempi, and lingered long upon some of the more measured phrases of the score.

The solo singers and the chorus also seemed to have been impressed with the same sort of strenuousness. Mme. Morena was the Elsa; and she was not in so good voice as she has been in her previous performances this season. Her singing seemed to be accomplished with an effort, especially in her upper tones, which she did not always reach in true intonation. But she is a charming Elsa in appearance, sympathetic and abundantly expressive in facial play, gesture, and pose, and she contributed some of the most charming scenes of the performance. Mr. Jadlowker was an extremely youthful Lohengrin; and this youth, in itself, is in his favor. But with it, in this part, unfortunately, went inexperience and the inability to create the illusion of the heaven-sent knight consecrated to a mission of other-worldliness. Mr. Jadlowker was not imposing, not dignified in his presence; nor did he adequately show forth the lofty respose, chivalrous tenderness of the messenger of the Grail. Some of his best moments were in the last act. Mr. Jadlowker has few of the resources of stagecraft that are needed for an impersonation of this character, and he is especially lacking in eloquence of facial expression. His fresh and resonant youthful voice stood him in good stead, and he let it be heard in all its sonority and fullness. But how much better his singing would have sounded if it had been controlled with a finer art, and especially with a more skillful treatment of the phrase!

Mr. Soomer's Telramund is a powerfully tragic impersonation, vehement in action, and last night, in accordance with the prevalent spirit, especially vehement in vocal effect. Mme. Homer was the Ortrud, as she has so often been before, and she was one of the most satisfying participants in the performance.

Mr. Hinckley was the representative of Heinrich der Vogler, and he showed better voice and better style than he has this season hitherto. Mr. William Hinshaw, one of the newcomers in the company, sang unusually well as the Herald, his enunciation being especially good.

The audience was large and was impressed by the sonorous effects of the performance and its brilliant stage pictures, if not by its imaginative quality.

Mr. Hutcheson's Recital.

Ernest Hutcheson gave his second piano recital in Mendelssohn Hall yesterday afternoon, in which the most important number was Chopin's sonata in B flat minor. Mr. Hutcheson's playing of it was of uneven merit. In the stormy portions of the first movement he was very stormy indeed, and here he often verged upon boisterousness; there was lack of clearness and definition. On the other hand, the singing second theme and the portion of the development in which it has a preponderating part he played with poetical feeling, balance of tonal values, and a fine singing tone. And the same characteristics were noted in Chopin's C sharp minor nocturne and his G minor ballade. In place of Schumann's little "Einsame Blumen" on the programme the pianist substituted a pretty piece by Howard Brockway, "Evening Song."

He played his own "literal transcription" of the prelude to "Die Meistersinger," a laborious and difficult undertaking that, in the concert room, has only its labor and its difficulty to recommend it. Lesser pieces by Rameau, Beethoven, and Schubert, Liszt's Etude de Concert in F minor, and Tausig's brilliant transcription of Strauss's "Nachtfalter" waltz made up the rest of the programme.

PAULA WOEHNING DEAD.

Transfusion of Blood from Her Husband Fails to Save Singer.

Paula Woehning, one of the contraltos of the Metropolitan Opera House, who was operated on Saturday in the German Hospital, died last night at 8 o'clock. After the operation on Saturday her condition was considered so serious that her physician attempted transfusion of blood as a means of saving her. His husband offered his arm for this purpose.

The attempt was without avail, however, as Mme. Woehning grew worse yesterday. Her last appearance at the Opera House was as Schwertleite in "Die Walkure" on Nov. 18. She had been a member of the company for several years, principally singing small parts in the Wagner music dramas.

'WINSOME WINNIE' HORN DEAD

Newsgirl's Sudden End a Climax to Series of Deaths in Family.

Winnie Horn, "Winsome Winnie," as she was known to many who bought newspapers from her for years at Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, died yesterday in a furnished room at 258 East Ninety-seventh Street. She was found dead in bed, and the Coroner said asthma was the cause.

The death of Winnie Horn came as a climax to a series of family misfortunes which have wiped out almost every one of her close connections. Six months ago her mother died. A month later her sister, better known as "Jinnie," shot herself dead, and prior to the mother's death the father and Emma, a sister, had died of tuberculosis.

Henry A. Powell.

Henry A. Powell, clergyman, lawyer, and politician, died at the Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, yesterday, from heart disease. Mr. Powell began his public life as a clergyman. It was while he was pastor of the Lee Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, in 1891 that he gave up the ministry to practice law. He then became a factor in Republican politics in Williamsburg. He helped to bring about the nomination of Frederick W. Wurster for Mayor of Brooklyn, and Mayor Wurster obtained the appointment of Registrar of Arrears of the City of Brooklyn for Mr. Powell. In 1906 Mr. Powell allied himself with the Independence League and became a leader of that organization in Brooklyn. Mr. Powell was born in Chatham, Columbia County, N. Y., on Sept. 13, 1851. He had a law office in New York and lived at 90 Joralemon Street, Brooklyn. He was prominent in Masonic circles, having held the office of Past Master of Baltic Lodge, F. and A. M.

WHITE, one of the three survivors of the Ashtabula Railroad wreck in Ohio nearly thirty-five years ago, in which twenty-three persons were killed, was buried in Wethersfield, Conn., yesterday. Mr. White was 80 years old, a veteran of the civil war, and was in the Confederate prisons at Andersonville and Florence in 1864. He leaves a wife and family.

JULIAN McALLISTER FRANCIS died suddenly Sunday in Butler Hospital, Providence, R. I. He was 44 years old and the last surviving son of the late Dr. Samuel Ward Francis of Newport, R. MR. HILL'S INTERVIEW FACTOR

Candid Expression of Unfavorable Opinion Brings Stocks Into a Market Lacking a Short Interest.

It was so easy to explain the violent breaks in prices on the Stock Exchange yesterday by reference to Mr. James J. Hill's pessimistic interview printed in this newspaper in correspondence from St. Paul that the speculative section of the financial community very promptly rested their case upon it. If these gentlemen were entirely logical they might feel called upon to explain at the same time why exactly similar utterances by Mr. Hill upon his visit to this city last week failed to effect, but logic is not one of their failings. As a matter of fact, the views held by Mr. Hill regarding the future of business in this country are those which have been expressed and reiterated, although less explosively, by men of prominence in the industrial and railroad worlds for months past and published and commented upon in all journals which have the right conception of the relations which they bear to the public. These sentiments, when put into print yesterday from Mr. Hill, created a real impression simply because they constituted a terse and colorful summing up of things which were being borne in upon thousands of people. As regards the effect upon the stock market, it is doubtful, indeed, if such abrupt declines as those of 3 points or more in Union Pacific, Reading, Steel, Lehigh Valley, St. Paul, and a score of other stocks would have occurred had the way not been paved for them by the speculative tactics of the group of operators responsible for all recent markets. This group had driven out of the market all but a negligible fragment of the short interest in stocks, which is so often the safeguard of prices. When offerings began to pour in yesterday, therefore, there were no shorts to cover their commitments at a profit, and as there was no public in search of bargains the outcome was inevitable. As to the lasting influence of Mr. Hill's talk, it must be helpful; commercial or financial reverses in this country, or in any other, are yet to be recorded where the preliminary stages were frankly recognized and precautionary measures taken.

There was practically no change in money market conditions so far as rates went, and bankers were inclined to look upon the day's heavy shipments of gold to California and Canada as purely routine. Engagements for these destinations were large, aggregating not less than $2,000,000 for the day and above $3,000,000 since the closing days of last week, but the current of gold sets toward California and Canada at this season of the year, and up to the present occasion at least the outflow has never disturbed the local market. The Bank of England secured the bulk of the arrivals of South African gold at London, and rates on American shares in the fortnightly settlement were again high.

CHICAGO STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Most of the stocks traded in on the local Exchange to-day showed weakness, the important exceptions being Peoples Gas and Commonwealth Edison, both of which held about steady. The weakness of the Eastern market had an unsettling effect on sentiment, and caused liquidation of speculative holdings.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Rift in the Clouds.

By way of contrast with the tenor of most comments on the railroad and business situation the announcement yesterday of the declaration of an initial dividend on the common stock of the Detroit & Mackinac Railway was received with considerable satisfaction. The Detroit & Mackinac, an independent road in Michigan, of which Henry K. McHarg is President, has paid dividends at the rate of 5 per cent. on its preferred stock since July, 1903, but the 2½ per cent. declared yesterday on its common stock, payable on Jan. 1, is the first dividend ever declared on the common stock. The present company was organized in 1894.

⁂

Banks Lose Gold.

The banks were called upon yesterday to supply gold for shipment to Canada, and also to make transfers of a considerable amount to San Francisco. Both these outward movements began last week, but the amounts sent yesterday exceeded last week's transfer and shipment. The Bank of Montreal sent $500,000 gold to Canada yesterday and another $500,000 was sent by the National Park Bank, making a total of $1,000,000 shipped to Canada. In addition two transfers through the Sub-Treasury, aggregating $750,000, were made to San Francisco, and an additional transfer of $250,000 to the Pacific Coast was being arranged, making a total of $2,000,000 which the banks here were called upon yesterday to provide for shipment out of the country or for transfer to the other coast.

⁂

Lehigh Valley Bows Low.

Lehigh Valley made its first bow to the traders yesterday, it was a low bow. It might, in fact, be called a Quaker bow. After closing at Philadelphia on Saturday at 94⅛ which being the "dollars per share" price is 188¼ according to the percentage system in vogue here, and at 94 on the Broad Street Curb, the stock began its life on the Stock Exchange list at 186, 2¼ points down or 1¼ points off Philadelphia's last sale. It subsequently fell to 179½ and closed at 180, after transactions of 19,000. The abbreviation on the tape is Lv.

⁂

Traders Blame Greedy Bulls.

The weakness of the market yesterday was used by the traders who have suffered lean times during the recent rise as a justification of their own much condemned position as professional equilibrators of price movements. The bull leaders in the movement of this Fall having been too greedy to let them take their accustomed profits by denying them the usual swings, they have complained. So, they say, the market was found bare yesterday of the short interest and in and out trading which help to stem market tides.

⁂

The News and the Market.

With its accustomed inconsistency Wall Street saw yesterday nothing but discouragement in the day's news. J. J. Hill's utterances in St. Paul, it forgot, were no more than a repetition of the more cautiously expressed views he gave voice to in this city a week ago. The first meeting of the Hadley Railroad Securities Commission in Washington yesterday and the filing of the bill in equity asking for the dissolution of the Sugar Trust, both old considerations freshly brought to mind, were also seized upon to feed a state of mind looking for justification.

Gates's Guests Optimistic.

John W. Gates was not in town yesterday to radiate optimism as has been his practice on all occasions since he withdrew from Wall Street to develop Texas, but his words of good cheer reached the Street vicariously through the return of a party of about forty business men and bankers who have been making a tour under his auspices of the properties of the Gates Texas Company. "Wall Street is the most depressed centre on the map," was the composite expression of the returning tourists voiced by one of its members, who illustrated with citations of the position of the Gates Company.

NEW ROCK ISLAND DIRECTORS

Pearson, Farquhar, and Kenna Out—Douglas, McLean, and James In.

The changes in the Board of Directors of the Rock Island Company which were expected to follow the acquisition by Phelps, Dodge & Co. of the stock in the company formerly held by the Pearson syndicate and taken over from that syndicate by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and their associates last July were announced yesterday.

F. S. Pearson, Percival Farquhar, and E. D. Kenna retire from the board and James Douglas, James McLean, and Arthur Curtiss James, all representatives of the Phelps-Dodge interests, have been elected in their stead. In addition to these changes A. J. Miller of Boissevain & Co. was elected a Director as the representative of important Dutch holdings of the stock in the place of D. G. Boissevain.

Mr. McLean becomes a member of the Finance Committee of the Rock Island Company and Mr. James a Director and a member of the Executive Committee of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway. The officers of the railway company have been re-elected.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—Heavy selling of Lehigh Valley stock commenced at the opening and the price quickly fell to 92 by 11 A. M. In the afternoon Valley broke well below this morning's point of resistance, selling down to 90. The volume of transactions remained comparatively small. Support was apparent in the last hour, but it only served to check the decline. The remainder of the Philadelphia list was more or less affected by the weakness on the big board. Rapid Transit Storage Battery and one or two others eased off quite sharply, and such arbitrage issues as Pennsylvania and Reading suffered accordingly.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Happenings of a Day in London, Paris, and Berlin.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Money was in good supply and discount rates were lower to-day.

The stock market was firm. Home rails had a further rise, on investment buying for the new account, and Mexican rails advanced on increased earnings. Foreign securities were neglected.

The Bank of England obtained $3,500,000 of the $5,000,000 gold in the open market, and this helped consols.

American securities were quiet and steady during the forenoon. Prices opened around parity, and then the active issues advanced a fraction. This level was maintained until late in the afternoon, when the market sagged on light offerings and closed dull.

Bar silver steady at 25 7-16d per ounce.

Money, 3½@4½ per cent.; rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 4½@4⅝ per cent.; for three months' bills, 4 3-16@4¼ per cent.

Gold premium at Madrid, 7.10; at Lisbon, 8.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Prices were steady on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 97f 47½c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 29½c for checks.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—Domestic securities were higher, but Americans declined on the Boerse to-day.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 48 pfennigs for checks.

Money, (for over the settlement,) 5½ per cent.

Private discount rate, 4⅝ per cent.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Following the heavy selling movement which was in evidence in the New York market the local list is lower as a result of the day's trading. There was no particularly heavy pressure in any one stock or group of stocks, but realizing was scattered impartially throughout the active list. Amalgamated and North Butte each lost nearly three points, but declines in the balance of the list are generally limited to around a point or two.

STOCKS have fallen continuously during the present year, the drops varying from 20 to 60 points. This represents a shrinkage of over a thousand million dollars in investments. What of the future? An investor buying any stock becomes a partner in the business subject to the risks of business—dull times, higher operating costs, Federal supervision, &c. Why not avoid both shrinkage in principal and all business risks by investing in GUARANTEED MORTGAGES? The security of a carefully selected first mortgage on New York City business or residence property—with the guarantee of a Company with a Capital and Surplus of $6,000,000—is beyond question.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

The Market Opens Strong and Promising—Wysong Residence, 34th Street and Madison Avenue, Sold—Estate Makes a $1,200,000 Investment Purchase in Loft Zone.

Several important sales involving both residence and business property furnished an active opening to the realty market for the coming week. The steady demand for good commercial property as an investment was seen by one of the largest sales of that character that has taken place in some time, the big loft nearing completion from 40 to 46 West Twentieth Street having changed hands for the second time within a year at a price said to be close to $1,200,000. The activity in the Bronx was illustrated by the sale of an entire block front.

Of noteworthy interest, in view of the recent purchase by B. Altman & Co., of the entire Madison Avenue front between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Streets in the rear of the Altman store, was the sale of the fine old John J. Wysong residence on the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, opposite the Howard house, which formed a part of the big plot lately acquired by the Altman concern. The Wysong house has a frontage of 30 feet on the avenue and is 95 feet deep. The buyer, whose name could not be learned, paid about $500,000 for the corner one which is one of the most valuable in the growing Madison Avenue business section. Rumor at once associated the name of Mr. Altman as the probable purchaser, but such is not the fact. The deal was made by George R. Read & Co., the same brokers who sold the upper Madison Avenue block to Mr. Altman.

The old Wysong house is a 4-story residence and up to about two years ago was occupied by the owner. He then built a new residence on the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street. Adjoining the corner just sold is the dwelling, 182 Madison Avenue, owned by Louise M. Pollock, while the house next to that, together with 24 East Thirty-fourth Street, stands in the name of the Francis Asbury Palmer Fund. The remaining frontage on the south side of Thirty-fourth Street, between Madison and Fifth Avenues, is owned by the Astors.

D. A. Loring Buyer of Morse House.

Daniel A. Loring, President of the Aetna Construction Company, is the buyer of the former residence of Charles W. Morse, at 728 Fifth Avenue, reported sold in Sunday's issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES. The property was acquired for investment.

It was sold by John N. Golding and Joseph P. Day for John E. Berwind, who came by the property through a foreclosure proceeding recently for $375,000, which was $15,000 under the obligations outstanding against the property at the time of the auction. The property is restricted to a private residence for the next seven years.

Estate Buys Midtown Loft.

A $1,200,000 investment purchase was made by the executors of a well-known New York City estate yesterday in the midtown loft zone.

The property purchased is the new 12-story loft building now in course of construction at 40, 42, 44 and 46 West Twentieth Street on a plot 107.8 by 92, just east of Sixth Avenue.

Mr. Crystal, President of the Fabian Construction Company, who sold the parcel, acquired the site from Judson S. Todd early last Spring. Apartment house and business property were given in part payment.

Another loft sale further was announced by Cammann, Voorhees and Floyd, who sold for Robert E. Kelly to a client of Robert Colgate & Co., the 5-story loft building 213 and 215 East Forty-fourth Street, on plot 43.4 by 100.5, near Third Avenue, or a little more than a block from the Grand Central Station.

Sprattley, the adjoining southwest corner of Westchester Avenue and 156th Street, a plot with frontages of 89 and 100 feet, respectively. The two parcels comprise the block front on Westchester Avenue, between Forest Avenue and 156th Street, the combined properties having a frontage of 262 feet on Westchester Avenue, 186 feet on Forest Avenue, and 100 feet on 156th Street.

About twenty-five creditors and attorneys were present. Frederick C. McLoughlin, the receiver, was unanimously elected trustee and his bond fixed at $20,000. He reported that the business for November showed a small surplus, notwithstanding that it was the poorest month in the history of the hotel. He recommended that the business be continued for the present and to pay the rent of $8,000 due the Kinney estate on Dec. 1, in order to protect the deposit on the lease, amounting to $66,000. Negotiations are pending between a prospective tenant and the landlord to take over the lease. The creditors voted unanimously in favor of Mr. McLoughlin's recommendations. The unsecured liabilities are $400,000. James N. Rosenberg said he represented a prospective tenant who is in negotiation with the landlord for the lease and to take over the entire business.

WILSON TELLS SMITH HE WILL FIGHT HIM

New Jersey's Governor-Elect Threatens to Stump the State Against the ex-Senator.

FAVORS MARTINE'S ELECTION

Alleged Threat by Smith's Friends to Defeat the Governor-elect for the Presidential Nomination.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 28.—Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson before leaving for Louisville, Ky., to-day to attend the conference of Governors this week, served notice upon ex-Senator James Smith, Jr., that he does not intend to consent to Mr. Smith's re-election to the United States Senate. The notice was in the form of a letter, courteous but none the less firm, which Mr. Wilson sent to Mr. Smith, and the knowledge that the Governor-elect intends to take the matter into his own hands has brought both factions, the friends of Smith and the friends of James E. Martine, who is the choice of the people as reflected in the recent direct primaries for the Senatorship, into the open. The fight is now on in earnest and, with Governor-elect Wilson and his following solid against Smith, there is every prospect that he will not go to Washington.

Dr. Wilson's attitude in deciding to take up the cudgels against Smith has cleared the political atmosphere marvelously and has made every one realize that the former President of Princeton University has now absolutely assumed the leadership of the Democratic Party in New Jersey.

Dr. Wilson would not discuss either the letter which he sent Mr. Smith or the United States Senatorship for publication, but those close to him said that the Governor-elect's fighting blood was up and that he was determined to see that the will of the people as expressed at the polls shall be carried out.

Letter Not Made Public.

Nor would either Dr. Wilson or Mr. Smith make public the letter.

Dr. Wilson is taking the attitude that the people of New Jersey at the direct primaries expressed themselves as being in favor of the appointment of Mr. Martine, and he doesn't propose that the Legislature shall be forced to send some one else to Washington just because this person has influence at Trenton. The selection of Mr. Smith, under the circumstances, Governor-elect Wilson believes would be one of the hardest blows ever directed against popular government in the history of the country.

Mr. Smith's followers plainly let it be known last night that they would resent what they term Dr. Wilson's unnecessary interference with the powers of the Legislature. It is for the Legislature to say who shall represent the people of New Jersey at Washington, and not the Governor, they argue. In fact, they are making open threats that by taking the stand he does, Gov.-elect Wilson has thrown away any chance he might have had for obtaining the Presidential nomination in 1912.

Ex-Senator Smith, they say, was willing to throw all his prestige toward having Dr. Wilson made the choice of the New Jersey delegation to the National Convention if he would keep his hands off the United States Senatorship. So much, in fact, was conveyed to Dr. Wilson, but it didn't seem to impress him very strongly. In fact, he turned down the proposal coldly, and only waited for the opportunity to put himself on record regarding his feelings in the matter.

To Speak Against Smith.

Only the other day a close friend was talking to Dr. Wilson about his attitude toward the Senatorship, and the Governor-elect told him how he had been served with a notice that the Presidential nomination might possibly go to him if he did not oppose the re-election of Senator Smith.

"I told my informant," Dr. Wilson is quoted as saying, "that I would not have another happy day as long as I lived if I went against the dictates of my own reason and conscience in this matter. Not even a Presidential nomination is a large enough inducemet to cause me to forsake the cause of popular government. I am against Smith and have told him so."

When the emissaries of Mr. Smith reminded the Governor-elect that he might be criticised for assuming a power which might more properly be left to the Legislature he replied that he had made up his mind that he was working for the cause of good government in opposing Mr. Smith, and he thought that if he explained this to the people they would understand his motives and back him up.

Having definitely decided to oppose Smith, Dr. Wilson does not intend to let the matter rest there. He will take the stump, it was said last night, and make speeches in every county seat in the State, explaining his attitude, and try and force the public to take the same view of the situation as he does, with a view of having the people insist upon the right kind of service from the legislators.

It was rumored last night that ex-Senator Smith had decided to retire from the race now that Dr. Wilson had come out in the open against him. He is down South at present, but his close friends denied the rumor. They say he has no thought of retiring.

Gov.-elect Wilson was accompanied on his trip to Louisville by Gov. Fort. He spent a quiet day at his home in Princeton after telling Robert Davis and other leaders that he was opposed to Senator Smith's election. When he returns it is expected that he will at once begin an active campaign against Smith and in favor of Martine.

It was said at Trenton to-day that Dr. Wilson does not intend when he takes office and assumes the leadership of the Democratic Party in the State to parcel out patronage. At the same time it is said that he understands the value of patronage and does not intend that it shall go to men who are not fitted for the positions.

Wittpenn for Martine.

Mayor H. Otto Wittpenn of Jersey City gave out to-day this statement advocating the election of James E. Martine to the United States Senatorship:

"I believe it would be a very grave mistake for the Democratic legislators to ignore the choice of the Democratic electors for United States Senator. I cannot see where they have any choice in the matter aside from carrying out the will of their party so decisively expressed at the primaries. The Democratic Party has vigorously advocated the election of United States Senators by the people, and it was due to the efforts of Democratic legislators that the present method of voicing the popular choice of the primaries was adopted.

"Failure to apply this principle at this, the first opportunity, in the face of the implied pledge, would, in my judgment, make a dead letter of the law and be a shameful reflection on the Democratic Party. Apply the principle now, and thereby serve notice that all aspirants for the second highest office in the State must submit their respective candidacies to the people.

"Mr. Martine's petition was circulated in Jersey City by Fred Kissam, representing the Democratic organization men generally. I am amazed to learn that the opposition to Mr. Martine in Hudson County should come from that same source. The time has gone by in public affairs when men or machines can ignore public pledges with impunity, and the sooner politicians realize this the better for them."

"BIG SIX" GIVES A DANCE.

10,000 Persons Attend Annual Benefit of the Typographical Union.

Madison Square Garden was bright last night for the sixty-first annual charity ball of Typographical Union No. 6. Fully 10,000 men and women attended the ball and dancers to the music of the large orchestra were apparently enjoying themselves, as the dancers always do at the functions of Big Six. There are 7,000 members of No. 6 in this city, and most of them seemed to be there last night.

John Mitchell, former President of the Mine Workers' Union, was there, as also were James M. Lynch, President of the International Typographical Union, and Samuel B. Donnelly, former President of the International Union, and now Public Printer at Washington. Delegations were also present from Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Trenton, Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken, Albany, Troy, Boston, New Haven, Bridgeport, and many other cities. President Tole of Typographical Union No. 6 was the master of ceremonies.

The proceeds from the ball will go to the union's hospital fund, which is used for endowments of beds in various hospitals for the use of members of the union.

ON TRIAL FOR ASKING A BRIBE

Timendorfer, the Go-Between, Tells How Yeandle Offered to "Hang" Jury.

George W. Yeandle, the juror in the trial of Edward T. Rosenheimer who was arrested for soliciting a bribe, was put on trial before Justice Blanchard in the Criminal branch of the Supreme Court yesterday. Dagobert Timendorfer, the go-between, who was arrested with Yeandle and who pleaded guilty to accepting a bribe, was the only witness.

When Rosenheimer was on trial for murder for the death of Grace Hough, after a collision with his automobile, Yeandle was selected as Juror No. 7, the trial being before Justice O'Gorman in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. It is alleged that Timendorfer went to James W. Osborne, Rosenheimer's lawyer, and told him that there was a juror who for $3,000 would have the jury bring in an acquittal. Timendorfer agreed to accept $2,500, $500 of which was to be paid the next morning, $1,000 on the day following, and the balance after Rosenheimer had been acquitted. Mr. Osborne telephoned to District Attorney Whitman immediately after Timendorfer had left, and it was agreed between Mr. Osborne, the District Attorney, and Justice O'Gorman that $500 in marked bills be handed to Timendorfer. This was done the next day, and the arrest of Yeandle and Timendorfer followed.

After Yeandle had been chosen as a juror and the court had been adjourned, Timendorfer said that he had missed Yeandle in the crowd, but that he saw him on Centre Street, talking with several other men and that Yeandle waved a paper at him, and he walked down to Worth Street, where he was joined by Yeandle a few minutes later. They then walked across to Mulberry Bend Park, and Yeandle said he had found a way in which they could get some money. Yeandle then outlined a plan, said Timendorfer, which was that Timendorfer should go to see Mr. Osborne and tell him that he could get a juror in the Rosenheimer trial to hang the jury and get an acquittal.

Timendorfer said that he did not like the plan at first but that Yeandle told him it was all right and that everyone was getting graft. Still, Timendorfer said, he refused to listen to Yeandle's plan and argued with him that it was not safe. Then, Timendorfer alleges, Yeadle said that the $3,000 would help them start an art store which they had talked about several times, and he finally agreed to see Mr. Osborne.

After talking with Mr. Osborne over the telephone he made an appointment to meet the lawyer at the Sherman Square Hotel at 7 o'clock.

At the hotel, he said, he told Mr. Osborne that for $3,000 he would obtain an acquittal for Rosenheimer. He told Mr. Osborne the juror he could get to hang the jury was No. 7. He then made arrangements with the lawyer for the money and then told Yeandle, so he testifeid, what he had done. Yeandle, he testified, refused to go to Mr. Knobloch, one of Mr. Osborne's assistants, in his house and they made an appointment to meet at Thirty-fourth Street and Park Avenue.

JEWISH FARMERS CONVENE.

Delegates from Four States Addressed by Oscar and Isidor Straus.

The second annual convention of the Federation of Jewish Farmers of America opened yesterday afternoon in the Educational Alliance, with forty-three delegates representing thirty-two organizations from New York State, Connecticut, New Jersey, and North Dakota. It will continue to-day and to-morrow.

In welcoming them Isidor Straus, President of the Educational Alliance, said they were doing much to destroy the bugaboo of "too much immigration," and that they were solving the problem of what to do with the immigrant. Oscar Straus, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor, urged the delegates to tell their friends in the crowded tenement districts how much better their opportunities would be on the farms. Rear Admiral S. A. Marx also spoke briefly.

The reports of the Executive Committee showed the federation to be in good condition financially and politically. There are 614 members and eight were elected to political offices in Connecticut and New Jersey. Vice President Hein, from Nassau County, L. I., warned his brother farmers against buying any gold bricks from east side confidence men.

If the good Mason who lost a Masonic charm on West Forty-first Street recently will call on Miss May Irwin, the actress, at Wallack's Theatre, he will get his badge on proving ownership. Miss Irwin found the charm while walking through West Forty-first Street, and in an advertisement in THE TIMES of this morning she offers to return the property to the owner.

Last week Lewis B. Reed of the American Surety Company of 100 Broadway lost a valuable Masonic badge in a Subway train. He put an advertisement in THE TIMES, and at 11 o'clock the next day after the advertisement appeared he received the badge by mail. A woman had found it and mailed it to him immediately after reading the advertisement in THE TIMES.

FEW RECORDS KEPT OF INSANE'S RATIONS

Even Those That Were Strangely Disappeared from the State Hospital's Archives.

COOK KNEW OF THE GRAFT

Complained of Short-Weight Meat, but Was Rebuked—Raines's Brother-In-Law Dodged Responsibility.

How rules drawn in conformity with laws passed while the late John Raines was the Republican Senatorial leader at Albany worked under the personal direction of Chief Purchasing Steward Frederick A. Wheeler, a brother-in-law of Senator Raines, to prevent the tracing of wholesale frauds in the commissary department of the Manhattan State Hospital on Ward's Island was further brought to light at a continuation of the State Lunacy Commission's hearing yesterday.

According to the day's testimony the huge purchases of meat and other food for the insane patients of the institution were carried on almost without any records at all being made. The books of a former purser on the boat by which the barrels of meat sold to Simon Katzenstein were transferred from the island were located for a period of several years ending in August, 1908. No entries were found to cover the semi-weekly shipment of the meat barrels.

The purser's testimony was to the effect that his books had never been looked at by any one, and that he had never been questioned about the "loss" of his records for the period from Oct. 31, 1908, to May 8, 1910, when he was relieved from duty. He was silent when asked why all other shipments except the meat shipments were carefully entered in his record.

The method of receiving meat in the kitchens, by which all check was destroyed upon the actual amount received in comparison to the amount billed from the meat house whence the Katzenstein barrels were surreptitiously removed at daylight each Wednesday and Saturday morning, was handled by Angelo D. Padekey, a French cook, who came to the hearing fresh from kitchen No. 3, asking the commission to hurry with him so that he could get back to his kettles before his dinner burned.

Padekey's story was one that made the Commissioners listen with the keenest interest. He knew that his meat came to him short weighted. He had always known it since the Katzenstein shipments of "boiled bone" first began, but he had learned through hard experience with his superiors that it was a matter about which he was supposed to see nothing and say nothing.

Before he had learned this lesson he had tried to weigh his meat as the rules required and the law provided. He weighed it on the platform scale provided by the State for his kitchen, and one day when the shortage got up to a whole hundred pounds in a single day's rations he decided it was time to complain.

An Assistant Steward, from whom Chief Steward Wheeler had testified he had to receive complaints before he would make any investigations, was the cook's immediate superior. To him he talked about the 100 pounds of shortage, and instead of receiving a sympathetic hearing was roundly denounced, being told that none of the other cooks was complaining and that he had better charge the shortage up to "bones."

Later he was asked on what scales he had weighed the meat, and when he pointed out the platform scales of a standard make he was told that they were no good and that he had better not take the trouble to weigh his meat any more, but to accept the allotments made him at the weight stated on the requisitions.

Mr. Wheeler said he had relieved Storekeeper Carroll from the duty of weighing the meat because he had rheumatism and could not attend to it. The storekeeper, when asked if this was so, declared he had never had rheumatism in his life, and that he was as fit physically when relieved of his duties in the meat shop as at any time in his life.

The Lunacy Commission's investigation was held in the island's new recreation hall, only Commissioners Ferris and Sanger being present. The State was represented by Assistant Attorney General Robert T. Beyer, and the District Attorney's office by Assistant District Attorney William A. De Ford. Charles E. F. McCann, a lawyer retained by Simon Katzenstein, was present in search of material which might be of aid to him in his hearing in the Morrisania Court, which is set for this morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Admitting that their day's quest made a sorry showing for the competence of members of the institution's staff, members of the Lunacy Commission said their investigation would be extended to all State institutions under the commission's charge, and that the bookkeeping especially would receive a rigid overhauling. The annual food purchases for the 30,000 patients in these institutions amount to about $5,000,000.

The witnesses from whose testimony the Lunacy Commission vainly sought to locate records which might help in untangling the Katzenstein alliances on the island besides Carroll, the storekeeper, and Padakey, the French cook, were John Cashell, a dock attendant; William J. Oshinski, a kitchen chef, and Thomas F. Glynn, former purser of the Wanderer, who, since the "loss" of his records when he left the Wanderer last April, has served as night pilot of a launch plying between the island and the mainland.

Ex-Purser Glynn's first statement on the witness stand was that he entered the incoming freight in his record in black ink and the outgoing freight in red ink. He was asked to pick out in his books the red-ink entries covering the Katzenstein shipments. He was unable to find any.

Oshinski, who was promoted from chief cook to kitchen chef five months ago, was asked if he made out his meat requisitions, each one certifying that a certain amount of beef had been asked for and received. He said that he had never checked up the weights called for and hadn't any idea whether the requisitions bearing his signature were correct or not. He had always taken the word of the cooks for it, he said.

John Carroll, who weighed the bones comprising Katzenstein's legitimate shipments from the island, denied all knowledge of the addition of barrels from the meat house to the bone barrels on the Wanderer's dock. He said that if he had ever seen the meat cutter wheeling barrels from the meat house to the pier he would have considered it a suspicious circumstance, and would have reported it.

The hearing will be resumed to-morrow afternoon, an adjournment having been taken over to-day in order to allow the Commissioners in Lunacy to attend the Katzenstein hearing in the Morrisania Police Court.

Commissioner Drummond of the city's Department of Charities admitted yesterday that food thefts had occurred from the city institutions on Blackwell's Island, but he said he had detected the thefts last Spring, and had devised a system of bookkeeping checks which would make them impossible in the future. In a statement commenting on the Ward's Island situation and charges that his department might become involved, Commissioner Drummond said:

"Statements printed this morning that the 'principal Commissioners' have been aroused by the activity of the Controller's 'army of detectives' supposed to be watching for stealings from the institutions of the various city departments similar to the meat thefts discovered at the State Insane Asylum on Ward's Island, are not true of the Department of Public Charities. Neither is it true that the 'era of great fear' has resulted in new orders to have all packages going out from any city institution examined and checked before being permitted to go aboard the boats. Such a rule was in effect at the charities institution on Blackwell's Island for seven months before the thefts from the State institutions on Ward's Island were discovered.

WIDOWED MOTHERS ASK AID.

Their Appeals Move Many In East Side Meeting to Join the Association.

A mass meeting of the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association in Clinton Hall, 15 Clinton Street, last night was attended by about 300 persons interested in charitable work on the east side.

A feature of the meeting was the reading by Joseph Barondess of twenty-five applications for aid which appealed so strongly to his hearers that many expressed a desire to join the association and help in the work. Other speakers were Mrs. William Einstein, Dr. Bernhard Senel, and Joseph Massel.

SAY PRAYERS SAVED HIM.

Parents of Boy Hit by Rives Auto Thus Explain His Recovery.

The recovery of six-year-old Victor Waldron of Yonkers from the coma in which he lay for forty-three days following injuries he sustained when run over by an automobile owned by former Corporation Counsel Rives of New York is being discussed by doctors there. The boy had been at death's door several times during his long period of unconsciousness, and even the specialists who treated the case were convinced that all that medical science could do would be to prolong but not save the little fellow's life.

The boy's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Louis V. Waldron, are certain that their son's recovery was accomplished by the power of prayer. Dr. Waldron said yesterday:

"Both Mrs. Waldron and myself feel that the prayers of our friends and various organizations have been answered. Victor showed a return to complete consciousness on Sunday, when a bright, happy smile of recognition lighted up his countenance when a friend went to his bedside. He further showed how far he was recovering his faculties by extending his hands to the gentleman. We feel a deep sense of gratitude to God and to the doctors and nurses who ministered to him."

Mrs. Waldron said last night that it was the prayers that doubtless saved little Victor's life. The suppliants who asked that the child's life be spared included the congregation of the Park Hill Reformed Church, the Boys' Club of St. Andrew's Church, various ministers and friends, and a number of social and religious organizations.

With the first signs of recovery Dr. and Mrs. Waldron had their son brought home from St. John's Riverside Hospital, where he had been under treatment for six weeks.
